Ford believes Nixon has suffered enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford said today he subscribes to the view that Richard M. Nixon has suffered enough over Watergate, but added that it would be "unwise and untimely for me to make any commitment" as to what he would do if the former President should face criminal prosecution.

Responding to the first question at his first White House news conference as chief executive, Ford said he shares the views expressed by Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller, who has said that "the tone and the mood of the country" is that Nixon should not face further action.

But Ford later said that a presidential pardon for Nixon is an option, and one he might ultimately consider. But he repeated that he is making no commitment now.

"Of course I make the final decision," Ford said when asked whether presidential pardon remains an option. "I do have the option as President to make that decision. I do not rule it out."

Ford also said flatly that he can foresee no circumstances under which "I can see the reimposition of wage and price controls."

"... Wage and price controls are out, period," Ford said.

Press Secretary Jerald F. terHorst said Ford held "bull sessions" in his Oval Office on Tuesday afternoon with close advisers to get ready for the news conference.

A veteran of 55 news conferences as vice president, Ford was described by his staff as unworried about today's meeting with reporters.

When he came to office, Ford promised to hold more frequent sessions with the press than his predecessor, Richard M. Nixon, who held 38 news conferences in 5½ years.

There hasn't been such a session in five months, since Nixon's last East Room news conference March 6 during the Watergate scandal.

Like presidents before him, Ford received scores of questions prepared by his staff on issues that might be raised.

One aide said they included such items as how Ford will deal with amnesty for Vietnam-era deserters and draft evaders and for Nixon; what role he has in mind for Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller, what changes he'll make in the White House and cabinet, and what's ahead for the economy.

Ford will have a new taller, but slimmer podium and a new arrangement in the East Room for the occasion. Unlike Nixon, Ford has ruled out wearing any makeup before the live television cameras.

Instead of appearing with a blue backdrop behind him on the east side of the East Room as Nixon did, Ford will move to the opposite side of the big ballroom with his back to the entrance door.

Instead of the studio effect the backdrop gave, aides feel the new setup will give television viewers the feeling that the President is really in the White House. Behind him, they will get a view through the doorway into the long red-carpeted cross hall of the White House.

Ford also met on Tuesday with economic advisers, who presented him with several proposals for aiding the faltering housing market.

New beginning

Most Sedalia youngsters returned to public schools Wednesday morning for the start of a new school year. In the top photo, John Thomas, principal of Heber Hunt elementary school, was almost trampled by the crowd of students rushing into the school when he opened the doors. Some were not quite as anxious to return. At right, Barry Craig, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Craig, 2007 South Warren, began his year in first grade with tears. ## On school attendance

Choice issue settled

The Sedalia School Board voted Tuesday night to require all students in a northeast Sedalia neighborhood who last year attended Striped College school to attend Heber Hunt school this year.

The board overruled a decision made Monday by Superintendent Dr. Allan Henningsen to allow parents in the neighborhood the choice of sending their children to either school. That decision came after the local branch of the NAACP protested having 12 black children transferred to Heber Hunt. The NAACP claimed that the move was designed to make Striped College an all-white school.

The motion was made by board member Dr. C. W. Monsees that all the students be sent to Heber Hunt and approved by the board 5-1. Board President Glen Kell Jr. cast the only dissenting vote, saying, "I vote for the same system we had last year which was approved by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Any new decision could open a bag of worms on this matter."

Dr. Chester Kirkpatrick said he could not live with a proposal which would allow people only in one neighborhood to choose where they wanted their children to go to school.

Henningsen warned the board that its action would bring criticism, no matter what the decision. Henningsen said only the parents of one child in the area were opposed to sending their child to Heber Hunt school.

The board action will affect 17 children in the northeast neighborhood. Monsees also said it should be publicized that, "We had no intention of making an all-white school, but we had received complaints of the distance we were bussing some children and we tried to remedy the complaint."

Monsees said that a complaint may now come from a different group in Sedalia but, "We can't assign one student to Striped College school." Kirkpatrick backed up Monsees and said if "we allow some people to choose their school, we would have to let them all choose their school."

When last year's elementary desegregation plan was put into effect, black pupils were assigned under a system that gave each school about an 8 per cent black student body. Striped College school was included in the plan.

Henningsen said Wednesday that the quota system was not required by HEW but had already been drawn up when he took over as superintendent in July, 1973. On Aug. 12 Henningsen changed the pupil assignment policy to eliminate the

Hammond defeats Hickel

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Conservationist Jay Hammond, a former state Senate president known for his poetry, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Alaska today, defeating a field of four candidates which included former Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel.

Hammond will face incumbent William A. Egan, a Democrat who won renomination easily in a primary that also saw Alaskans vote overwhelmingly to move their state capital from Juneau to a more central location.

In Oklahoma, where primary votes were also cast on Tuesday, House Speaker Carl Albert nailed down his 15th consecutive term in Congress, and Gov. David Hall's try for renomination ended in failure.

Oklahomans also apparently rejected a controversial proposal to legalize parimutuel betting on horse races by county option.

Hammond, 52, a commercial fisherman, bush pilot, big game guide and former state legislator from the southwest Alaska village of Naknek, often read his own poetry to his colleagues while serving in the state Senate from 1967 to 1972.

With 348 of 441 precincts reporting, Hammond had 23,520 votes or about 48 per cent. Only a plurality is required for victory. Hickel had 16,326 votes: former Gov. Keith Miller had 8,366; and two minor candidates trailed far behind.

Hickel, 55, is a former governor who left the Statehouse in 1969 to join the Cabinet of former President Richard M. Nixon. He was fired a year later after criticizing Nixon for isolating himself in the White House.

In other races, state Sen. C. R. Lewis, a member of the national board of the John Birch Society, defeated state Senate President Terry Fairbanks and three other candidates in an upset for the GOP nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Lewis will face liberal Democrat Mike Gravel, the incumbent, who defeated three candidates.

Egan, seeking his fourth term, captured 93 per cent of the vote against a token opponent, former Alaska Federation of Natives President Don Wright of Anchorage.

The voters approved moving the capital from Juneau, reachable only by air or water, to a more central location presumably near — but not in — Anchorage or Fairbanks. A report released during the bitter campaign estimated the

Gas rate jump is second in a month

For the second time in one month, the Missouri Public Service Co. has increased its natural gas rates — the latest hike by 1.99 per cent, it was announced Wednesday.

The company said the increase was due to the higher cost of wholesale natural gas purchased from the Cities Services Gas Co. "The increase is exactly equal to the company's increased costs from Cities Service," said MPS in a news release.

For Sedalians, this means that gas prices will go up an average of 18 cents a month, according to the local MPS office. The hike is expected to generate $105,426 in new revenue for the company a year.

The last increase, averaging 5.38 per cent, or 49 cents a month, came July 24 and was based on the same reason. That increase was expected to result in $285,473 in new revenue annually.

Walter Savio, district manager for MPS here, said Cities Service must receive approval for all rate increases from the Federal Power Commission. Then, before MPS can pass the increase on to its customers, approval must be obtained from the Missouri Public Service Commission.

It was earlier erroneously reported that when MPS is faced with a rate increase, such approval is not needed.

The August rate hike is the sixth for Missouri Public Service Co. customers since last December. The natural gas increases now stand at better than 21 per cent since last year.

Savio said a hearing was held before the Public Service Commission Tuesday concerning the company's current request for another increase in electrical rates. No decision on that has been reached yet, however, Savio said. In May, the company was granted an increase in electric rates averaging 20.2 per cent a month for residential users.

Ashcroft's claim is disputed

State Auditor John Ashcroft's inference Wednesday that an overpayment of $6,744 in state aid to State Fair Community College was detected recently by his staff was challenged by SFCC President Fred Davis.

In a letter to Ashcroft Wednesday, Davis said the overpayment was detected earlier by "our own accounting procedures and independent audit procedures."

The mistake, Davis said, was caused by the incorrect certification of more than 16 Whiteman AFB airmen who were taking SFCC courses offered at the base. The airmen were incorrectly classified as "full time equivalency (FTE)" students. An overpayment of $6,680 was received by the college because of the mistake.

An additional $65 was overpaid the college as a result of the FTE figures for the 1969-70 school year being rounded off by college officials.

Both mistakes were "corrected accordingly" upon their discovery, Davis said.

Ashcroft also inferred that overpayments to three other community college districts in the state were also detected by his office. The districts were the Kansas City metropolitan district ($2,515); Moberly ($785); and St. Louis ($25,927).

Ashcroft's statements, Davis wrote in his letter, have "done a great disservice to all of the community colleges of the state and more specifically, those particularly mentioned, as it reflects on the integrity of the Boards of Trustees of these colleges and upon the administrative staff.

"Any reflection upon the integrity of the Boards of Trustees or staff of the community colleges of the state would certainly impair the local support necessary in each of our districts," he continued.

Patty Hearst proves an elusive foe for the FBI

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I know what I have to do," Patty Hearst said in her most recent statement from the underground. "My comrades didn't die in vain... I still feel strong and determined to fight."

With that enigmatic promise of action, delivered in a tape recording on June 7, the renegade newspaper heiress vanished from center stage.

She has not been heard from since.

Published claims have placed her in such diverse possible hideouts as Guatemala, Panama, Canada, Illinois, Los Angeles and the San Francisco Bay area.

Miss Hearst, 20, was dragged screaming from her Berkeley apartment on Feb. 4. Two months later in tape recordings she denounced her newspaper publisher father, jilted her fiance, adopted revolutionary rhetoric and said her name was now "Tania."

She is wanted on charges of kidnaping, assault and robbery, along with captors-turned-comrades William and Emily Harris, thought to be the last members of the SLA. If captured and convicted, she could be imprisoned for life.

"We do not know whether or not she is out of the country," FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley said at one point. "We do not know where she is."

Reports of eyewitness "sightings" of Miss Hearst and the Harrises continue. "We've got new leads in this case and we still get new leads coming in almost every day," FBI Special Agent Charles Bates said on Tuesday.

But Bates, who has been directing investigation of the case from San Francisco, added, "I don't have anything specific as far as developments are concerned."

Bates, who has admitted that he loses sleep worrying about the case, said, "I think our chances of catching any federal fugitive are good. We catch thousands of them every year. I think we will catch Miss Hearst and the other two, but I just can't tell you when."

The San Francisco FBI alone has interviewed 22,000 people in connection with the case, Bates said.

In California, police have stopped hundreds of persons for questioning because they were suspected of SLA connections or resembled the fugitives.

More tips have been followed by law enforcement agencies in other parts of the country.

Six SLA members, including the group's leader, Donald "Cinque" DeFreeze, died in a fiery shootout that destroyed their Los Angeles hideout May 17.

Two witnesses said they believed Miss Hearst left the hideout shortly before the shootout, but the FBI discounted the reports.

The last reliable sighting of Miss Hearst was on May 19 when a Los Angeles landlady said two black men and a white woman tried to rent an apartment for the night for $500. She said that when she told them there was no room, one of the men nicked her dress with a knife. The landlady picked out a picture of the heiress from a row of photos.

The tape with the heiress' vow to fight on for the SLA was found under a mattress in an alley after an anonymous telephone call to a Los Angeles radio station.

In Salt Lake City, Utah, the Highway Patrol issued a bulletin for a man resembling Harris. In Sandpoint, Idaho, a jail escape briefly was linked to the SLA but was later discounted as a connection.

Last month in the Los Angeles suburb of North Hollywood more than 150 police officers surrounded an apartment building after being tipped that Patty Hearst was there. Police later complained that mobs of spectators rushed to the scene so quickly that police could barely get through the crush when they arrived.

Miss Hearst's distressed parents, Randolph A. and Catherine Hearst, who had rushed to Los Angeles by plane, left saying they were "very disappointed." Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner, said, "I wanted to be of help in the final end of this story if it came here."

The Hearsts returned to the seclusion of their Hillsborough, Calif., home to continue the ordeal of waiting for word of their daughter.

Hearst has said he believes his daughter was brainwashed by her captors.

Authorities have been plagued with fake letters contending to be from the SLA.

In early July, a television reporter, crediting an unidentified police source, claimed that Miss Hearst and the Harrises had traveled to Guatemala and made contact with underground political leaders there but returned to the San Francisco Bay area.

Bates termed that report "news to me" and said, "I know nothing that would lead me to the conclusion that any of them were ever in Guatemala."

Then, a Washington reporter, crediting

School insurance question

By PETER WEAVER

If you have any young people in your family — from kindergarten through college — you may have special, back-to-school insurance problems.

Most schools offer cheap, group medical and accident insurance coverage for children while they are in school, on the bus, participating in school activities or even on a 24-hour-a-day basis (while not in school).

Usually, you pay the small premium without even knowing it. It's part of the costs for books or activities. Some private schools put this insurance coverage right in the regular bill. Because the amount is small, you figure it's a good deal. Nice to have the kids insured.

But, in a number of instances, you may be getting double coverage and will be wasting your money. If you have group medical insurance for your family through an employer or association, your child's medical expenses while in school are probably adequately covered. Getting the extra school policy could be a waste of money. Check with your group insurer to see if your child is properly covered. In most cases, if the child is injured while in school (playground, group activity) the school pays anyway.

A side note about football insurance: Many schools require special, rather expensive, insurance for players trying out for a varsity or subsidiary football team. This is because of the higher injury risk and costly repair jobs for such delicate areas as knees. Again, check with your family medical insurer (if you have one) to see if the football player is already covered.

Of course, if you don't have adequate family medical insurance coverage, school group insurance can be a real bargain. Be sure to ask the school to send you a booklet on what the policy covers. Some cover everything. Others have some tricky exclusions (limit X-rays, pay only so much for doctors visits, fights not covered if child is proven to be aggressor). Some schools offer some coverage for injury to teeth but this must be checked carefully with dentist to see what you're getting for your money (often a lot of exclusions here).

It's a good idea to check your family medical insurance when a young student goes off to college. At age 18 or 19, most group insurers drop the coverage and many families don't realize it. Colleges and universities offer group medical insurance for students and families would be wise to take it — except when their own family policy still covers the student adequately (during the first year or two to age 19).

Private schools and most colleges and universities offer parents "insured tuition" plans where the big annual tuition, room and board bill is whittled down to monthly payments throughout the year. An insurance premium is tacked onto the monthly payments to provide for full coverage through graduation in case the breadwinner parent should die.

These tuition plans sound alluring because of the neat monthly budgeting feature. Most plans have insurance that costs around four per cent of the total school bill. If annual tuition, room and board come to $5,000 (not uncommon these days), your insurance premium would be $200 a year or $800 for the full four years. If you have enough regular life insurance or can get more for less money, avoid these tuition plans. If your health won't allow getting adequate life insurance, a tuition plan can be a Godsend.

Then there are the life insurance sales pitches made to students in college, usually in their junior or senior year. Unless the student is working and a family depends on his or her pay, it's not a good idea to get life insurance at this stage. Life insurance is basically designed to protect dependents. When and if a student gets married and a baby is expected, that's the time for a getting five-year, renewable, convertible term insurance (the best buy). Under most circumstance, getting life insurance sooner is a waste of money.

Say plan doesn't go far enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — A double-barreled White House plan to keep income tax returns from prying politicians is running into opposition from Congressional privacy advocates who say it doesn't go far enough.

A White House official disclosed on Monday that the Treasury Department was asked to draft legislation that would curtail government agencies' access to returns filed with the Internal Revenue Service. A companion executive order would keep the President from peeking, too.

Aides to former President Richard M. Nixon sought IRS confidential data for political purposes, according to evidence uncovered by the Senate Watergate committee and House Judiciary Committee. These disclosures spurred attempts to better protect privacy of tax returns.

President Ford's interest in curtailing access grew out of his pre-presidential work on the Domestic Council Committee on the Right to Privacy, said a White House official.

But Rep. Jerry L. Litton, D-Mo., said the proposed legislation is full of loopholes and the executive order would be worth less than a simple promise from Ford not to look at the tax returns.

Litton publicized a Nixon executive order last year that authorized the Department of Agriculture to examine farmers' tax returns. The order was revoked by Nixon this year.

He and Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., a member of the Senate Watergate committee, sought approval this year for a law that would clamp down on access to tax returns, but haven't succeeded so far.

Litton said that three weeks ago, Philip Buchen met with him to discuss the administration's tax return privacy goals "and we pretty much agreed on what is needed to be done."

At that time, Buchen was executive director of the Domestic Council privacy panel. Now he is White House counsel to Ford.

Litton complained that the original administration proposal has grown from a few pages to more than 40 as it was circulated to different agencies.

He said it has been loaded with exemptions "to appease every agency that wants to keep its access."

The White House said the proposal still is being drafted, and wouldn't comment on its details or its expected time of completion.

Litton's bill would permit the President to seek tax return information only in checking an appointee to high federal position.

Local club places first in its zone

The announcement that the Sedalia Noon-Day Optimist Club placed first in its zone this quarter highlighted the club's weekly meeting Tuesday at Bothwell Hotel.

The honor, announced by club president Dr. J. Edgar Harvey, was awarded on the basis of points earned through various service projects. These included youth activities, club building and new membership efforts.

Club president-elect Bill McCune reported that the fourth-quarter Optimist meeting, held recently in Kansas City, was a success.

Special guest at the meeting was M. Sgt. John Carr, a United States Marine Corps recruiter, who showed a film depicting Marine training.

Sentenced for defrauding the federal government

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Bernard Benjamin Blatt, owner-manager of JRS Industries in Kansas City, Mo., has been sentenced to 3½ years in jail and fined $2,500 for defrauding the federal government.

The sentence was imposed Monday by U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman after he rejected a defense request for probation for Blatt, one of three men indicted in March by a federal grand jury.

The case against one of the three was dismissed by the government. They had been indicted on 18 counts of conspiring to defraud and of defrauding the government of more than $34,000 through false merchandise claims.

Guilty pleas on two counts were agreed to by Blatt and by a former Navy employe, Therman Kenneth Sessoms, who was sentenced in July by Hoffman to a five-year prison term. The pleas were entered in exchange for the sentences they received.

Defense attorney Augustus Anninos, in his effort Monday to convince Hoffman to place Blatt on probation, said he has noticed there seems to be some public concern in the country regarding "sentencing disparity."

He referred to the case of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who was fined $10,000 and given a three-year suspended sentence last October by Hoffman for evading $13,551 in income taxes.

Anninos noted Hoffman was "privileged to be named sentencing judge in the Agnew case" but said he was not going to comment on its disposition because "the only facts I have are those I read in the papers. I'm sure Your Honor was apprised of facts by the prosecution that we, the public, wasn't privy to."

"I was apprised of the fact that Mr. Agnew was entering what was the equivalent of a plea of guilty to income tax evasion for one year (1967)," said Hoffman, without acknowledging Anninos' carefully worded comments on the case.

"I was also apprised of the fact the government was claiming other violations of the law and that Mr. Agnew was denying them. As to the details of those other violations, I was not apprised of the facts."

To grant Blatt probation "would completely destroy plea bargaining," said Hoffman, who added that Blatt was getting the best of the deal by pleading guilty to only two counts—one alleging conspiracy and another alleging he defrauded the federal government of $810.12.

"If all the evidence came out, this $34,000 would be peanuts," Hoffman said. "They were charged in 18 counts, but I suspect the FBI could have listed another hundred."

The judge noted that in a presentence report read to the court, Blatt told a Missouri probation official he did not try to defraud the government and pleaded guilty because he could not afford the legal expenses.

"If that's Mr. Blatt's position, I'm ready to try the case," said Hoffman.

Blatt said he did not wish to plead not guilty and admitted his involvement in the defrauding conspiracy.

COLUMBIA — A Sedalia man who sustained serious injuries in a motorcycle-car accident Aug. 20 was reported in good condition Wednesday at the Veterans Hospital here.

Larry Walter Arnold, 30, Route 3, suffered multiple fractures and lacerations when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a car at 32nd and Limit in Sedalia.

Case is here on change of venue

A change of venue case was filed in Pettis County Circuit Court Wednesday morning.

The case, from Henry County, involves Jackie Dale Davis and Terry Lee Hill, who are charged with second degree burglary and stealing.

They are accused of entering the Western Auto Store, Clinton, in January and taking seven television sets and one stereo. Total value of the equipment was listed at $2,311.82.

July index of leading indicators up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's measure of future trends in the economy rebounded in July on the strength of an improved job picture and labor costs, the Commerce Department reported today.

The departent said its index of leading indicators pushed up by 1.8 per cent over June, when the index recorded its only drop so far this year, a six-tenths of 1 per cent decline.

The Commerce Department said the strongest upward pressure came from the cost of labor involved in production. The price-labor cost ratio improved by 3 per cent in July, meaning $10 worth of labor produced $11.70 worth of goods, compared to $11.36 in June.

New claims for unemployment benefits shrunk to 282,000 in July, the lowest level since November.

Other improvements were reflected in a longer average work week, increased orders for durable goods, increased spending on factories and equipment and higher prices for industrial materials.

Exerting a downward influence on the index were declining stock prices and a dip in the number of building permits issued.

The over-all index is designed to foreshadow future trends in the economy, but economists debate whether it is accurate. The index has moved steadily upward since 1973, although it was relatively stationary late in the year just prior to two consecutive declines in the nation's total output of goods and services.

Council predicts fewer fatalities

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Safety Council estimates that between 450 and 550 persons may die in traffic accidents over the Labor Day weekend.

The estimate is the lowest in 11 years for the final summer holiday.

Vincent Tofany, council president, credited the low estimate to the 55 mile-[illegible] speed limit and economic factors.

Cosmonauts' mission is cut short

MOSCOW (AP) — Less than 40 hours after they were hurtled into space, two Soviet cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 15 are returning to earth without docking with an orbiting Russian space laboratory, Tass reported today.

The Soviet news agency gave no explanation why the cosmonauts, Gennady Sarafanov and Lev Demin, would not link up with the Salyut 3 unmmaned laboratory. Earlier reports indicated the two spaceships would link up.

Tass said only that the Soyuz 15 made many approaches to the space lab, "made observations of the approach to the station," and inspected Salyut 3, which was sent up June 25.

Tass said, "Under the program of the second day, the cosmonauts made experiments to perfect the technique of piloting the ship in different flight regimes ... According to reports of the crew and data of telemetric information, the cosmonauts feel well."

Tass indicated the return to earth would not start before 4 p.m. Moscow time (9 a.m. EDT).

Soyuz 15, which was given the name Dunai, or Danube, was launched late Monday from the Baikonur space center in Soviet Asia. Tass said then that the purpose of the flight was to continue the work of Soyuz 14, which docked onto Salyut 3 for two weeks while the two crewmen worked aboard the orbiting lab.

The Russians as usual did not announce that such a linkup was planned for Soyuz 15, but the Tass announcements and the similar orbits of the two satellites led Western observers to expect one.

Both recent Soyuz missions have been in preparation for a joint Soviet-American space venture scheduled for July. American officials have reportedly been pressing the Russians to test the redesigned Soyuz craft and its linkup equipment thoroughly.

Cuban embargo support being reappraised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration is reassessing the long-standing U.S. policy of support for the hemispheric embargo of Cuba, according to diplomatic informants.

The policy reappraisal comes in the face of mounting hemispheric pressure for an end to the diplomatic and economic sanctions imposed against Cuba 10 years ago by the Organization of American States. Presently, seven of the 23 OAS member nations have relations with Cuba in violation of the sanctions.

Costa Rican Foreign Minister Gonzalo Facio said on Tuesday there are more than enough OAS votes for lifting the embargo and he predicted its end within two months.

Sources said, however, that American acquiescence on an end to the embargo would not necessarily be a prelude to a normalization of U.S. relations with Cuba.

Cuban support for revolution in Latin America — long an irritant to Washington — has diminished considerably. But Cuba is still a force for fomenting anti-American sentiment in Latin America, a strategy that may be accelerated as Cuba secures additional diplomatic footholds in the hemisphere.

Cuba also is one example of the limitations of the detente policy pursued by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Officials note that detente has not produced a moratorium on Soviet efforts for "anti-imperialist upheavals" in Latin America and other Third World areas. In the words of one Moscow theoretician, Cuba is an important ingredient in the "development of the revolutionary process in Latin America."

Accordingly, diplomatic observers here believe a protracted thaw process will be required before there can be serious talk of an exchange of ambassadors with Cuba, even after the OAS embargo is lifted.

Turkey rejects proposal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Turkey has rejected the Soviet proposal for an 18-nation conference on the future of Cyprus.

Meanwhile, the Greek Cypriot government asked for a United Nations Security Council meeting to discuss the plight of the 200,000 Greek Cypriots reported driven from their homes by the conquest of the northern third of the island.

Foreign Minister Turan Gunes told the Soviet ambassador to Turkey that the proposed parley — which would include the 15 members of the Security Council plus Greece, Turkey and Cyprus — might set a precedent for unwarranted Security Council interference. It also might prolong negotiations, Gunes added.

Gunes reiterated his government's position that the future of Cyprus must be decided in negotiations between the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities along with Turkey, Greece and Britain, the guarantors of Cypriot independence under the island's 1960 independence treaty.

In Washington, Turkish Ambassador Nuri Eren accused Moscow of trying to prevent a solution to the Cyprus problem and create chaos in Greece. He asserted that Greece also does not like the Soviet proposal, although the Greek government has accepted it formally.

The Security Council meeting requested by the Cypriot government was expected Thursday. The meeting also will provide a platform for Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik to urge his government's conference proposal and for a report from Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on his three-day tour of Athens, Nicosia and Ankara.

The U.N. high commissioner for refugees, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, completed a six-day inspection of the refugee situation on Tuesday and flew back to Geneva to issue a plea for international help.

Turkish troops in northern Cyprus rounded up hundreds of Greek Cypriot men on Tuesday for interrogation, and a Turkish officer said those who were "soldiers in civilian clothes" or members of the EOKA-B underground army would be sent to Turkey as prisoners of war.

Hearst

"informed Latin American sources," claimed that Miss Hearst had traveled from San Jose, Costa Rica, to Panama where she was given asylum by a Panamanian general. The story said Miss Heart's travels were arranged through diplomatic channels.

The State Department's Latin American office branded the report false.

From Chicago came a claim that Miss Hearst and the Harrises have been trying to make contact with the radical Weather Underground.

In San Francisco, a claim surfaced last week that the mother of a San Quentin convict may be hiding Miss Hearst and the Harrises in a racially integrated neighborhood of Los Angeles.

Bates said he was checking out all leads and "we have known that there were people who have acted to assist the SLA members in this area and in Los Angeles." But he would not confirm the report.

The three-month lull in actual develolments has not dissipated public interest in the Patty Hearst saga. Tips continue. Although reports of "sightings" have diminished, each published rumor draws responses.

move will cost about $110 million, or roughly $330 for every Alaskan resident.

In Oklahoma, Albert won easily over two Democratic rivals in the 3rd Congressional District in seeking renomination to the House, and he has no Republican opposition in the November general election.

Hall, whose campaign suffered from a scandal involving kickbacks on state contracts, ran a poor third behind state Sen. David Boren and Rep. Clem McSpadden, who gave up his 2nd Congressional District seat to try for the governorship.

With 2,484 of 3,040 precincts counted, Boren had 184,821 votes, or 37 per cent, to 184,713, also 37 per cent, for McSpadden. Hall trailed with 130,325, or 26 per cent.

If the margin holds, Boren, a former Rhodes scholar, and McSpadden will face off for the Democratic nomination in a Sept. 17 runoff, which is necessary under state law unless one primary candidate receives 50 per cent or more of the total vote.

On the Republican side, state Sen. Jim Inhofe advanced to the November general election by whipping former state Sen. Denzil Garrison.

Sen. Henry L. Bellmon easily turned aside a challenge by Warner Hornbeck for the Republican nomination to the Senate. Former Rep. Ed Edmondson led a six-man race for the Democratic nomination.

"I do not think this is educationally sound, to transport youngsters over long distances just to meet an 8 per cent quota," Henningsen said Wednesday. He said that some pupils riding the bus that made the Striped College run were spending 40 to 45 minutes in transit, and that several parents had complained.

Dr. Henningsen said he talked Wednesday morning to a HEW attorney in Washington who told him that the school board's action Tuesday night was "legally and pragmatically defensible."

In other business, the board opened bids for insurance on five school buses, five maintenance vehicles, one administrative car and two drivers education cars. It awarded the contract to McCully Insurance Agency, 622 South Ohio.

McCully's bid of $1,531.42 was lower than bids received from Yount Insurance Agency, J.O. Latimer Agency and the Farmers Insurance Group.

The board considered a request from the Holsum Bakers of Sedalia for a key to school buildings where the company delivers its products. The board rejected the request, saying if Holsum had keys to buildings, other service companies would want similar treatment, which was not in the best interests of the school system and its security.

The board approved a contract for 1974-75 with the Children's Therapy Center for rental of three classrooms for the hard of hearing, orthopedically handicapped and developmental kindergarten classes.

The center will provide a speech therapist, an occupational therapist, a physical therapist and a full time counselor for use by the district. The cost for these services was set at $3,150, the same as last year's cost.

Services cut from last year include the deletion of two teacher aides. However, the Therapy Center also offered the services of an audiologist, a psychiatrist and physical examinations at additional cost to the district if the services were desired.

After an executive board session the following appointments were announced: Mike Rooks, half-time music teacher at Hubbard School; Mary Beth Bazin and Marsha Buescher, special education teachers at Hubbard School; and Theresa Sorensen, elementary school teacher.

The board also accepted the resignations of three teachers: Richard Jones, Ann Baker and Blake Turner.

Food, money taken from business here

Police said Wednesday that Mary Prine, owner of Bunnie's Barbeque, 204 South Engineer, reported that the business was broken into sometime Tuesday night.

A radio, cigarettes, a tray of barbequed pork ribs and an undetermined amount of money were reportedly stolen. Entry was gained by breaking a window in the front door.

It was also reported that an undetermined amount of food was stolen from the kitchen at Hubbard School, Osage and Henry, somtime Monday night. The theft was discovered by Alonzo Bird, 1420 North Osage, a custodian at the school. No value was set for the loss.

with a recommendation that state aid to the colleges be paid quarterly rather than in one lump sum.

The state, he said, could possibly earn $153,000 more per year in interest by making the payments quarterly.

Business audits are scheduled by inspector

City License Inspector Bob Brown Wednesday announced he will soon begin conducting audits of 36 local businesses to determine if they paid the proper fee for their 1974 retail merchant's license.

The initial cost of the license, which is determined at the beginning of the fiscal year, is based on the estimated amount of gross revenue a store owner expects to make during that year. Brown's audits will reveal whether the store's actual earnings matched the estimated figure and what, if any, adjustments will have to be made in the cost of the license.

In fiscal year 1970, before the audits were held, the city collected $53,055. During the past fiscal year, Brown said, $90,538.53 were collected.

The businesses to be audited were selected at random, Brown indicated. The audits will be completed in October.

Festival incident to lead to trial

Walter C. Prohaska, 33, Detroit, Mich., was bound over for trial in the September term of the Circuit Court.

Prohaska is charged with the assault of Kenneth Swinford, Sedalia, during the Ozark Music Festival on the night of July 19.

At a preliminary hearing Wednesday, Swinford testified he entered the festival through a hole in a fence. Upon walking away from the fence he was stopped by Prohaska and was told to pay $3 for entry. Swinford said he refused to pay the money and started to walk away.

At that time, according to his testimony, Prohaska tapped him on the shoulder. Swinford said as he turned around Prohaska hit him in the face with his artifical arm's hook. Swinford said the blow resulted in severe cut to his face. He was taken to Bothwell Hospital for surgery after he and a friend, Steve Fritz, Town House Manor, stopped a car on the other side of the fence. Fritz also testified.

Defense attorney Craig Cassing maintained the state did not provide enough evidence that Prohaska intended to do great bodily harm to Wwinford. He asked that the charge be dropped.

Magistrate Judge Hazel Palmer rejected this and bound Prohaska over for trial. Prohaska is free on $7,500 bond.

Arms sales embargo on Israel and some Arab nations lifted

PARIS (AP) — The French government today lifted a seven-year-old embargo on arms sales to Israel and some Arab countries, a Cabinet spokesman announced.

Weapons sales to these countries "could henceforth be authorized after a case-by-case study," spokesman Andre Rossi said.

The change in policy was prompted when it was revealed earlier this month that Libya had loaned French-built jets to Egypt for last year's October war with Israel.

Besides Israel, the embargo affected Egypt, Syria and Jordan. Libya violated the clauses of its arms accord with France and thereby made the French embargo policy irrelevant.

Egypt and Syria have been getting all their weapons from the Soviet Union but Cairo's recent improved relations with Washington has dried up the arms pipeline from Moscow.

Rossi did not say whether France has been approached by Egypt or Syria for possible weapons sales. Jordan has relied on the United States and Britain for most of its weapons.

The French aircraft industry is ailing and in need of sharply boosted sales abroad to help in offsetting the increased cost of oil imports, making the embargo unpopular in France.

Door-to-door effort for college is planned

Backers of the State Fair Community College bond election are planning a door-to-door campaign prior to the submission of the $5.5 million capital improvements issue to the voters Sept. 24.

A previous election on March 5 saw the levy fall short of the two-thirds majority needed for approval. The Pettis-Benton County Citizens · Steering Committee recommended the resubmission to the State Fair Community College Board of Trustees on May 29. The board voted unanimously to go along with the recommendation.

At a steering committee meeting Tuesday night, members made plans for the pre-election campaign. Mrs. Jo Ann Lambirth, co-chairman of the drive to get the bond issue passed, said enough volunteers are being sought so that "neighbor will be talking to neighbor."

"That will be much more effective than for someone from another area to come in and tell people about it," Mrs. Lambirth said.

The committee, consisting of about 20 persons, was given an information packet about the need for the levy. Two of the most frequent questions are, "Why don't you spend the Yeater money?" and "How much is it going to cost?" The materials seek to provide answers.

Also included in the packet are breakdowns of cost to each area school district if their students use the area vocational-technical school at SFCC as opposed to what it would cost if the districts attempted to provide facilities and instruction themselves.

For instance, if the LaMonte School District were to build its own facilities and purchase equipment it would require a tax levy of $3.33, or $119,000, according to the packet information. The approximate 15-cent tax levy SFCC is asking would cost the district only $5,361.

President Fred Davis told committee members, "Small high schools will be a thing of the past if we don't keep this area vo-tech school going. They're going to have to meet certification requirements or close their doors."

Davis was referring to the certification requirements set forth by the State Board of Education. One of these requirements is to provide vocational-technical training.

The purpose of Tuesday's meeting was to get each school district organized in the campaign. Sept. 12 was designated as the date for the next committee meeting, which will include the entire steering committee and all persons who have volunteered to help. The 7:30 p.m. meeting is open to all persons interested in seeing the levy pass.

Many people are under the misconception that advertising for the election is coming from college funds, Davis said. He explained that there is a separate fund of donations that pays for advertising. The only cost to the school is the election itself, Davis said.

Attack aftermath

South Vietnamese civilians walk dejectedly through the ruins of their village home near the northern province town of Quang Ngai recently in the aftermath of a Viet Cong rocket attack. Relatively quiet since the January, 1973, cease-fire accord, Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in the past month have stepped up attacks on district towns and government outposts.

Eagleton donors revealed

ST. LOUIS (AP)—St. Louis businessman Joe Simpkins heads the list of donors to the re-election campaign of Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., according to Eagleton re-election committee records.

Simpkins, the chairman of Tiffany Industris and one of 21 St. Louisans who contributed at least $1,000 to Eagleton's cause during the past two years, has given $10,000.

Bankers, labor unions, attorneys and insurance executives are responsible for most of the $436,173 garnered by the Eagleton campaign through Aug. 1, but the records also list 236 contributors of less than $10 each.

Most notable of insurance contributors is the son of the late Gov. James T. Blair, James T. Blair III, who has donated $1,500.

Among bankers, Howard Cook, Wade Hampton and Fred Rost, all executives with the Central Trust Co. in Jefferson City, have given $5,800.

Labor unions are responsible for $37,000, with the Committee on Political Education leading the way with $5,000 gifts in each of the last two years.

Chemical byproduct is identified as culprit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — In 1972, birds started dying at a St. James farm and at three horse stables at Fenton, Moscow Mills and New Bloomfield, Mo.

"People said the birds would fly over and then just drop dead," Dr. Patrick E. Phillips, a state Health Division veterinarian, said Tuesday.

Then horses started dying.

Out of 54 horses that became sick at the Shenandoah stables at Moscow east of St. Louis, 35 died. Six horses died at Timberline stables near New Bloomfield north of Jefferson City.

Six more horses died at the Bubbling Springs stables near Fenton in the St. Louis area, and a woman and her two daughters, aged 10 and 6, got migraine headaches.

The girls were hospitalized, the 6-year-old with symptoms of a kidney disorder. The family worked at the Fenton stables.

They now are okay and all the stables are safe, Phillips.

The culprit has been identified as Dioxin, a highly toxic byproduct of the manufacture of 245T, a chemical defoliant used until 1971 in Vietnam. The parent chemical is trichlorophenol, used in making material for treating wood.

The verification of dioxin, short for tetrachlorodibinzo-para-dioxin, came three weeks ago from the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

How did the dioxin get on the stable tracks?

Phillips and Dr. Herbert Domke, state health director, said it was traced to a man who bought waste oil and chemicals in the St. Louis area and put it on the exercise grounds and horse arenas to kill weeds and keep down dust.

The man used it on his stable area at his farm in St. James. He didn't lose any horses, but a caretaker lost 70 chickens and a dog, Phillips said.

The residue was put on the stablegrounds in May and June of 1971, a full year before the horses started dying.

Division of Health officials began tracking the toxic agent after the soil had been removed, contributing to the delay in identification. Also, the concentration of the toxic agent was quite low, Phillips said.

Although no Health Division employes have gone on the rounds with the waste oil buyer, "we talked to him quite a bit and we're convinced he didn't know he had the dioxin," Phillips said. "It's never happened before in the state and hasn't happened since."

Two companies that manufactured the herbicide, 245T, in Missouri have gone out of business. The man who bought the residue didn't buy from them anyway, Phillips said.

But he obtained some sludge from a disposal area in Illinois where waste chemicals from railroad tank cars were dumped. Whether the dump contained dioxin has not been determined.

Garages and service stations were ruled out as a source because the toxic agent was not found in waste oil that the man collected and used or resold.

"It had to come from an industrial source," Phillips said. "We're going to keep on looking."

"We're lucky there were no human deaths," Domke said." This type of thing is completely unpredictable. This shows there needs to be even more careful concern for hazardous chemicals developed in a highly industrialized civilization."

Guinea-Bissau becomes new nation on Sept. 10

ALGIERS (AP) — The first of Portugal's African colonies to get independence becomes the new nation of Guinea-Bissau on Sept. 10 and all Portuguese troops are to be gone by Oct. 31.

According to the independence agreement signed in Algiers Monday, the colonial administration of Portuguese Guinea will be replaced by the rebel government proclaimed last fall by the liberation movement in the West African territory, the African Party for the Independence of Guinea and the Cape Verde Islands.

The rebel government is headed by Aristides Pereira, 50, who succeeded Amilcar Cabral as head of the party after Cabral was assassinated in January 1973. Cabral was founder of the liberation party.

The independence agreement ending four centuries of colonial rule was worked out in negotiations held in London and Algiers since May. It was signed by Foreign Minister Mario Soares of Portugal and Maj. Pedro Pires, the deputy defense minister in the rebel government.

The agreement proclaimed an immediate cease-fire in the guerrilla war that the rebel movement has been waging since 1962.

It said that independent Guinea-Bissau and Portugal will maintain "a relationship of active cooperation — particularly in the economic, financial, cultural and technical fields — on a basis of independence, mutual respect, equality, reciprocity of interest and harmonious relations."

The agreement does not provide independence for the 275,000 people of the Cape Verde islands, an archipelago in the Atlantic some 450 miles northwest of the Guinea-Bissau coast. But Portugal said it would hold a self-determination referendum on the islands at some future date "in accordance with relevant resolutions of the United Nations."

Guinea-Bissau has a population of 800,000, mostly poor farmers. Once the new military regime in Portugal decided to let the African colonies go, Portuguese Guinea was the logical choice for a starter since it is of no economic importance to Portugal and has few white settlers.

Big field to vie for honors in show here

Nearly 1,000 entries are expected to compete for some $6,000 in trophies and prize money at a special quarter horse show to be held Friday through Sunday at the Missouri State Fair Coliseum, it was announced Wednesday.

LaRue Sauers, 710 West Sixth, superintendent of the show, said it has been approved by the Missouri Quarter Horse Association, the American Quarter Horse Association, the Northeast Kansas Quarter Horse Association, the Missouri Cutting Horse Association, the Eastern Missouri Cutting Horse Association and the National Cutting Horse Association.

Admission is free to the three-day show which begins at noon Friday with youth activity classes. Halter and performance classes will be held Saturday night. The cutting horse competition will begin at 8 a.m. Sunday.

A paint horse show will be held at 9 a.m. Monday in the Coliseum, Sauers also announced. A total of 33 classes of competition will be held, it was reported.

Newest investment vehicle is debated

NEW YORK (AP) — The performance last week of the corporate bond market's newest investment vehicle—notes with floating interest rates—left Wall Street debating whether they are really here to stay.

Floating notes brought to market last week by The New York Bank for Savings, Mellon National Corp. of Pittsburgh and Crocker National Corp. each nearly sold out.

But in all three cases, the size of the offerings had to be reduced from originally planned levels. The issuers blamed "market conditions," but a spokesman for a leading bond underwriting house suggested that the small investor—the target of the floating rate notes—may be signaling he is not as willing as many believed to withdraw all his savings and lend them to corporate floating bond issuers.

The notes are sold in $1,000 denominations to give investors access to high-yield, short-term issues.

"I think there is a point where the bond market can be saturated with these floating notes," the underwriter's spokesman said. "The source for almost all the money is individual savings accounts. When people stop raiding their savings banks, where will the money for these bonds come from?"

More optimistic was a spokesman for Philadelphia National Corp., a bank holding company which plans to offer a $50 million floating rate note around mid-September.

"Last week's offerings were more than the market could support. But that doesn't mean the floating rate vehicle itself is wrong."

He said the idea of tying, or "indexing" the interest rates of a bond to other inflation-sensitive money rates—in particular, short-term Treasury bills—is here to stay until inflation is genuinely under control.

Meanwhile, in addition to reductions in the offerings, issuers also were pushed into raising the initial interest rates on their notes.

Crocker National Corp. had already increased their rate to 10 per cent last Aug. 5 and Mellon National Corp. and Continental Illinois Corp. last week increased their interest to 10 per cent from the previously-planned 9 70 per cent. After two years, the interest floats, one percentage point above the yield on three month treasury bills.

Market conditions again were cited for the moves. One bond analyst added the increases interest rates on last week's floating notes were a direct response to the sudden rise to 9 80 per cent in short-term Treasury notes at their latest auction last Monday.

But a spokesman for one of Wall Street's biggest bond underwriters expressed doubts that floating rate notes would be used extensively as a capital raising vehicle by industrial borrowers. The spokesman said underwriters are, and will continue to be leery of backing floating issues offered by any companies except those generally in the buisness of borrowing and lending money in large sums.

Peace Corps well diggers aid area facing drought

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta (AP) — After six years of diminishing rainfall, this small West African nation on the southern rim of the Sahara Desert is facing the worst drought in living memory. Crops burn in the ground. Water holes go dry earlier and earlier each year. Livestock is dying for lack of pasturage.

Aiding Upper Volta in its urgent search for more water, Peace Corp volunteers have overseen the construction of more than 1,200 hand-dug, wide-diameter wells in what is described as "a true self-help project."

Unlike the traditional dirt water holes, which are easily contaminated and cave in after a season or two, the new wells are cement-lined and reinforced with steel rods. They provide a safe, reliable and accessible source of water for hundreds of thousands of Voltaic villagers and their herds.

No heavy equipment or advanced technology is involved in building the wells. It is basically a pick-and-shovel operation, with the villagers providing the labor. Funds for the materials — cement, molds and steel reinforcing rods — come from OXFAM, the British-based famine relief organization, and the U.S. Agency for International Development. The Voltaic government pays for the mason's salaries and transportation of supplies.

The "Koum Nabas," or Water Chiefs, as Peace Corps welldiggers are affectionately called by the villagers, view their job as that of catalyst and organizer. They see to it that the cement and various tools are at the well sites when needed. They also train local masons in construction and maintenance techniques.

Other than digging a straight hole, the most difficult part of the job is deciding where to dig. For this the volunteer relies on the village "sorcerer," a person of authority such as a priest, magician or the chief himself. He determines the most likely spot to find water by using a divining rod. While obviously not foolproof, this ancient and universally-tested method generally produces good results.

Once the well's diameter is staked out, the chief mobilizes the village men to do the digging. Women and children are recruited to bring sand and gravel, which they carry in baskets on their heads, for mixing with the cement.

With picks and shovels, the workers dig through the tough laterite crust, sometimes to a depth of 100 feet or more before hitting water. A simple rope pulley is mounted above the gaping hole to remove buckets full of reddish earth.

The volunteer relies on a local mason or villager whom he has trained to insert the steel reinforcing rods, pour the cement and build up the lip of the well so children and animals won't fall in. The three-foot high lip and concrete apron around the well also prevent contamination by dirt and surface water.

Clivus maltrum may replace flush toilet

By JEAN BRAUCHER
Associated Press Writer

ROCKLAND, Maine (AP) — A member of the Rockefeller family wants to put a clivus multrum in every American home.

"I am quite sure that something had better replace the flush toilet in the next ten years, something that doesn't use water or lose the nutrients in human waste," says Abby Rockefeller, 31.

The daughter of New York banker David Rockefeller and niece of Vice President-designate Nelson Rockefeller prefers to be called Rockefeller rather than precede her last name with a courtesy title.

She is president of Clivus Multrum USA which has started production here of the device she hopes will replace that Victorian invention, the flush toilet.

The clivus multrum is the 30-year-old Swedish invention of Rikard Lindstrom for composting human waste without unsightliness or odor.

Clivus is the Latin word for inclining, referring to the incline of the bottom of its tank, and multrum is a composite word in Swedish meaning composting room.

The clivus requires no water, no chemicals and no energy to operate. It is a large fiberglass tank in which toilet and kitchen wastes decompose for several years, producing a small amount of odorless humus which can be returned to the soil. The liquid and gas in the wastes escape through a roof vent.

The flush toilet is not a minor environmental offender, according to Rockefeller.

"It is doing as much harm to our water as the automobile is to our air," she said. Three to eight gallons of water are used per flush and the water turns the waste nutrients into polluters that cause eutrophication, she says.

Production of clivus multrums began in here in July at the rate of four a week and now sell for $1,300.

Although the initial cost is high, Rockefeller says the clivus multrum would have considerable long range economic benefits.

It reduces household water use by 50 per cent and has no moving parts, so no maintenance is needed. On a community basis, it makes a central sewage treatment plant unnecessary. Such a plant for a community of only 500 people costs about $4 million, she says.

Rockefeller says she is concentrating on marketing the clivus multrum in New England.

But the device has attracted the attention of the Environmental Protection Agency, which is conducting tests. Two of them are in use in California and one each in the Green Mountain National Park in Vermont and the White Mountain National Park in New Hampshire.

Elderly doctor continues his work

By MARILU DAUER
Associated Press Writer

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. (AP) — Age hasn't forced Dr. Jesse Smith Bean into retirement, even after 70 years of practicing medicine.

"I just got in the habit, and I can't quit," said the 96-year-old general practicioner who specializes in chronic and nervous diseases and obstetrics.

"I just can't make up my mind to retire and sit around and do nothing," said Bean, who admits his eyesight is failing him.

Nevertheless, his hours are 8 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Bean is the oldest practicing physician in Kentucky and one of the oldest in the nation.

He has practiced out of the office at his home for 30 years and until a hospital was built 10 years ago "I was in the office all the time," Bean said. Now patients number three or four a day.

Bean, a native of Ohio County, graduated from the old Hospital College of Medicine in 1904, now the University of Louisville.

Bean then set up practice in Olaton, and later in four other towns before he moved to Vine Grove in 1926 and Elizabethtown in 1944.

He recalls making only house calls when he began practicing because doctors didn't have offices then. A patient's kitchen was the operating room. There were no hospitals, no telephones. Horses were often the mode of transportation.

"In those days, people didn't pay much. Nobody had anything," he said, adding he once received a cow as payment from a patient he treated for pneumonia.

New home contractor is caught in squeeze

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Contractor John Mixon of Trimble, Mo., usually builds about 30 new houses a year. Right now, he doesn't have a single home under construction.

Mixon is caught in the tight money squeeze that has hit buyers, builders and bankers and caused some industry sources to forecast that Americans will have to change their way of life.

The Commerce Department reported recently that the number of new houses started in July was the smallest in more than four years. At the same time, the government raised the maximum allowable rate on federally insured home loans to a record 9.5 per cent.

An Associated Press survey showed that mortgage rates vary from area to area, depending on state laws. The amount of money needed for a down payment also varies, up to 40 per cent in some regions. Throughout the country, however, available houses are more expensive and loans are harder to get.

Mixon says there is very little construction going on right now. "There's not much point in even giving a prospect a price estimate on a house he wants to build unless he's got the financing pretty well lined up," he said.

Bankers say they don't have money to loan. They say deposits are down because investors can get more interest by putting their money in things like treasury notes than they can from savings accounts.

James T. Lynn, secretary of Housing and Urban Development, said on Sunday that the report that housing starts slipped to just under an annual rate of 1.34 million units in July, 16 per cent below June and the lowest figure since 1970, was disheartening.

Arthur Rheingold, a 32-year-old attorney with the New York State Public Service Commission, is one of the would-be home owners affected by the shortage of mortgage money.

Rheingold makes "over $30,000" a year. His wife works as a graphic artist and together they have what Rheingold calls a "healthy" income. Since their marriage five years ago, they have rented the top two floors of a two-family house.

They spent six months searching for a home of their own and found one they liked — a $50,000 townhouse. The first bank they tried wouldn't give them a mortgage.

The second bank finally agreed to a 25-year, $38,000 mortgage at 8½ per cent. A loan officer at the bank told Rheingold it was the first mortgage he had seen all year.

Rheingold was lucky: he got the money. Tom and Jane Sisolak have been looking for a house in the Fort Worth, Tex., area since spring. But they have been unable to find one they can afford or a mortgage at a rate they can pay. The Sisolaks, who are in their early 30s and have been married seven years, are still living in an apartment.

Walter Nolte, president of Carriage Estates Co., an Indianapolis, Ind., construction firm, echoed several bankers and builders when he said people are simply going to have to change their way of living.

"I think we're approaching the day when a young family no longer will be able to afford a single residential home," said Nolte. He predicted more people would buy condominiums. "That's not what the young buyers want," he said, "but it's all they can afford."

Reporter on Lindbergh kidnap case recounts story

Editor's Note: Samuel G. Blackman, former General News Editor of The Associated Press, covered the Lindbergh kidnap case when he was an AP reporter. Blackman, now retired, tells the story of that tragedy.

By SAMUEL G. BLACKMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-two years have passed since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son, 19-month-old Charles Jr., was kidnaped from the Lindberghs' Sourland mountain home in Hopewell, N.J.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a 36-year-old Bronx carpenter, died in New Jersey's electric chair for the child's murder. But the then-governor, the late Harold G. Hoffman, stirred wide controversy by expressing doubt even on the eve of the execution and many years later that Hauptmann committed the crime — or could have done it alone.

I covered the kidnaping that blustery night of March 1, 1932, and the execution of Hauptmann the night of April 3, 1936. The case against him was largely one of circumstantial evidence and Hauptmann continued to insist he was innocent. In the intervening years there has never been a shred of evidence to alter the verdict that Hauptmann acted alone.

The baby, first son of the famous flier and the former Anne Morrow, had been tucked early in the evening into his crib because he was suffering from a cold. Several hours later, nursemaid Betty Gow visited the nursery on the second floor and found the baby missing.

Lindbergh, reading in the downstairs library, searched the nursery in vain.

"Anne, they have stolen our baby," he testified later that he told his wife.

He notified the state police, took a rifle from a closet and began a search of the estate.

He was accompanied by three state troopers when I came across him.

"I'm Col. Lindbergh," he said, introducing himself. "I can't say anything now."

With flashlights blinking, he and two troopers continued the search. One stayed behind and related what was then known — Miss Gow had found the crib empty, and a $50,000 ransom note, a wooden ladder and a chisel had been found.

Much of the case against Hauptmann turned on this ransom note (and on later ones) and on the ladder. The original note, crudely and ungrammatically written, demanded "25,000$ in 20$ bills 15,000$ in 10$ bills and 10,000$ in 5$ bills." The note said: "After 2-4 days we will inform you where to deliver the mony."

The "singnature" on the note, and promised on future ones, was two interlapping circles with three square holes.

Dr. John F. Condon, a Bronx schoolteacher, was named intermediary and became famous as "Jafsie" (from his initials J.F.C.).

On the night of April 2, 1932, Condon paid the $50,000 to a man who from a hedge in a Bronx cemetery yelled, "hey, doctor" and again, "hey, doctor, over here." In return Condon got a note which said, "The boy is on the Boad Nelly — you will find the Boad (cq) between Horseneck Beach and Gay Head near Elizabeth Island." — presumably the waters off Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Lindbergh searched there and in many other places in vain. For two months by land, sea and air he pursued flimsy clues and phantom ships and then learned when he returned May 12 from a search off the Virginia Capes that the child's body had been found in a shallow grave five miles from the Lindbergh home.

The ransom money led to Hauptmann's arrest. The government had distributed 250,000 circulars giving the serial numbers of the notes — $35,000 in gold certificates, $15,000 in other paper currency.

On April 5, 1933, President Roosevelt, in a measure born of the depression, ordered that all persons possessing more than $100 of gold certificates exchange them by May 1 for other currency at banks of the Federal Reserve System. On a central map at state police headquarters in Trenton, N.J., Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the superintendent, stuck a locator pin where each note was found. Most of them were in the Bronx.

It was there that Walter Lyle, a gas station attendant, received a $10 gold note on September 15, 1934, and wrote on it the license number of the car whose driver bought five gallons of gas. Hauptmann was arrested four days later. He had a $20 gold note on his person and in his garage they found $14,600 more.

Hauptmann's explanation was that the money had been given him in a shoe box by a friend and business partner, Isidor Fisch, when Fisch left for Germany. He died there before Hauptmann was arrested.

When this money was offered in evidence in the trial, Atty. Gen. David T. Wilentz, who prosecuted the case, asked a witness, Frank J. Wilson, special agent in charge of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Service:

"So far as you know, Mr. Wilson, since the indictment of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for murder has there been one ransom bill turned up?"

"No sir," Wilson replied.

He conceded that all the ransom gold notes were never detected, saying that "several billions" of dollars worth of gold certificates had been exchanged and it had been impossible to detect every one.

Wilentz could not be reached Monday, but he has told me in many interviews that nothing has ever been developed to change any of the testimony.

In an interview on the 40th anniversary of the kidnaping he said: "Not one thing that I know of has developed since the trial that could cast doubt on the positive proof that the defendant wrote the ransom notes; nothing has developed to disprove that he hid the ransom money in his garage or that lumber from his attic was used in the construction of the ladder."

Seven handwriting experts for the state compared the handwriting on the ransom notes with Hauptmann's handwriting and testified that Hauptmann wrote them all.

Arthur Koehler, a wood technologist of the United States Forest Products Laboratory of Madison, Wis., one of the state's star witnesses, traced the wood in the kidnap ladder from a mill in McCormick, S.C., to boards from Hauptmann's attic.

Koehler said a ladder rail had once been part of a floor board in the attic. Koehler said he laid the board on a joist in the attic and found the nail holes in the board matched those in the joist.

Koehler said that knives with plane lumber at a mill often leave tell-tale markings on the wood. He said he detected a tiny groove which he knew had been made by a knife of a certain type. He spent 18 months checking 1,598 planing mills to trace the origin of the wood.

One with markings spaced like those on the ladder rail led to the South Carolina firm, Koehler said. He traced 45 carloads of lumber from the mill to 25 firms and in November 1933, — 10 months before Hauptmann's arrest — found a lumber company in the Bronx which had lumber with markings matching those on the ladder rail.

Wilentz argued the ladder broke as Hauptmann was leaving the nursery "and down he went with this child." He said the child died instantly and then said of Hauptmann:

"Knowing the child was dead ... he yanked and ripped that sleeping garment of that child off his body ... he didn't need the child ... he needed the sleeping garment ... some few miles away he scooped up a hastily improvised and shallow grave and put this child in it face downwards."

Hoffman, who had granted Hauptmann one 30-day reprieve the day before he was scheduled to die, said he shared "with hundreds of thousands of our people the doubt as to the value of the evidence that placed him in the Lindbergh nursery on the night of the crime ... I do doubt that this crime could have been committed by one man ..."

Hauptmann's appeal from the death sentence was carried to New Jersey's highest court which said: "Our conclusion is that the verdict is not only not contrary to the evidence but one to which the evidence inescapably led."

Herbs form the basis of New England cookery

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Weekending not long ago at a venerable inn in the lovely Massachusetts village of Old Sturbridge, I learned some things I never knew about herbs, which form the basis of much New England cookery.

For one thing, New England housewives learned years ago that the seeds of the nasturtium, that quaint, funnel-shaped flower, make a pretty good substitute for capers, if you are whipping up a salad or sauce.

If there are no nasturtium seeds handy, take some fresh young peas and bottle them in vinegar for a couple of months.

A list of herbal hints was given us by an amiable young woman in the old village which is in reality a rambling museum area where you can watch villagers grind yellow cornmeal the way our forefathers did and demonstrate how to cook in brick ovens.

Some of the hints were pretty far out. One said that anyone who shies away from drinking black coffee at night should, as a substitute, drop some mint into boiling water and sweeten the mixture with honey. Coffee still sounds better.

I was interested in the soup bags housewives use in the area. Much like the French bouquet garni, these two-inch squares of cheesecloth tied with string are filled with a mixture of dried and powdered herbs including parsley, savory, thyme, chervil and marjoram.

The bag is dropped into whatever soup the lady of the house happens to be making about 20 minutes before it is ready.

Two other methods of spicing up soup were suggested.

—Tie together with string two sprigs of fresh parsley, summer savory, thyme and marjoram and lower that into the bubbling soup about 15 minutes.

—Cut a slice or so of bread into small cubes after spreading lavishly with butter. Sprinkle the bread cubes with parsley, chives and thyme and toast under the broiler. Just before serving put two or three bread cubes into each soup bowl. I tried that one and it's delicious.

Sociologist specializes in women's problems

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — "After 25 years, I'm on my second honeymoon. At last I have something to tell my husband at night," one woman said.

She hasn't remarried. She simply decided to go back to work.

How do you find a job after 10, 15 or 20 years of being a wife and mother? By applying for one. What is the fastest way to lose a job? By getting the wrong one, says Evelyne Sullerot, a sociologist who specializes in the problems of women.

L'Institut National pour la Promotion Feminine, a brand new "school" under the auspices of the Ministry of Education, is dedicated to helping women get out of the rut where marriage put them.

"After years in the home, women don't want to do the same work as before their marriage. They've changed. Meanwhile, business methods have progressed. It's impossible for the older generation of women that stopped working to compete with young college graduates," said Mrs. Sullerot, director of the institute.

The frail-looking blonde herself took time off from work between 1949 and 1957 to raise her four children. She emerged from her pots and pans to found the French Family Planning organization.

"During those years I didn't work 'outside,' but I never worked harder in my life," Mrs. Sullerot says wryly.

What they learn is not to type or keep books, but simply to diagnose their aptitudes, dust out the corners of their minds and to discover new fields of endeavor.

"Many businesses seek mature women who are more stable than the young. France historically has always had more women working than the United States. But after World War II the bourgeois mentality took over. Women who stayed at home were highly respected," Mrs. Sullerot explained.

Today the opposite is true. "A woman who stays at home is less than nothing. She feels a loss of prestige and self respect. Her friends work and so do her daughters," she added.

"In the business world, women must learn to leave their personal problems at home. How many women cry when their boss yells at them. They feel, 'He doesn't like me,'" Mrs. Sullerot said.

During the month of intensive training, students also receive lectures from businessmen in various fields and make field trips to several companies. At the end, they are advised individually on which areas suit them best, and vice versa.

They are ready to go into business.

"At 20 years old, you can afford to make a mistake. At 40, no," Mrs. Sullerot added cheerfully.

Registration deadline set

The registration deadline for "Coping With the High Cost of Living," a five-week workshop for young homemakers under 35, is Sept. 5. Classes will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. for five consecutive weeks, beginning Sept. 13, at the First Methodist Church, Fourth and Osage.

The workshop is an effort to help young homemakers prune family living expenses. Each session will be taught by University of Missouri Extension area home economists, dealing with the high costs of home furnishings, clothing and textiles, the family, food and living costs in general.

A fee of $6 will be charged to cover material and supply expenses. Babysitters will be provided at the cost of 50 cents per child per class.

For more information or enrollment forms, contact Beverly Pfeiffer, area home economist, at 827-0591.

Health program changes structure

At a recent State Fair Community College board meeting, Nila Hibdon, dean of the vocational-technical school, announced Mrs. Amy Young, Route 4, as department chairman for health occupations. Mrs. Young assumed duties Aug. 1.

The department includes the practical nursing program, adult health offerings, emergency medical service project, career education program, health occupations for high school students and in-service education at Bothwell Hospital.

Mrs. Cynthia Henke, 2509 Anderson, has been named coordinator of the practical nursing program.

Reunion held

The 12th annual Sigman and Scott reunion was held Sunday at Liberty Park with a contributive dinner attended by 58 persons.

Always a catch to a cleaning job

By POLLY CRAMER

My Pointer is that while knitting I badly needed something to mark off counted stitches (I think bone rings leave spaces). I hit on the idea of sticking two ring paper enforcements together. They cost little, are very light and can be left on if needed and snipped off when desired. — MRS. A. M. F.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with repairmen and-or others who promise to come at a certain time or on a specified day and then do not show up or may come two or three hours late. A homemaker also has things to do and business to see to but cannot do them because she has to stay at home waiting. — MILDRED.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. R. C. A. wanted to know how to get rid of spiders and their webs that are between her windows and storm windows. We place a few moth balls between such windows and never have any spiders. — MRS. J. S.

DEAR POLLY — I suggest that Mrs. R. C. A. put some leftover pieces of hand soap between her regular and storm windows and she will no longer be bothered with spiders. This, of course, takes for granted there is room. If there is not room the larger pieces might be shaved and work just as well. I put small leftover pieces of soap under the beds or anywhere I have had spiders and it helps. — VERA.

DEAR POLLY — Use an old but clean toothbrush to style your wig. It is just the right size. Polly's Pointers are the first think I look for in the paper. — DORA.

Thanks for those nice words. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Your economy-minded readers need never buy another washcloth. A bath towel that is beginning to fray along the edges will make eight washcloths. Measure with a favorite to get the right size after cutting off the selvage and fringe. Tear or cut into squares and pull loose threads to make a short fringe that will grow longer as they are used.

Also save money on hot water and detergent by washing towels and washcloths separately from the other clothes. They are not so heavily soiled and can be washed in cold water with half the usual amount of detergent. Agitate just three or four minutes. Almost all the water and tear on towels comes from laundering and washing. This shorter cycle should make them last longer. — NANCY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I wonder if some reader knows of a wash I could use for cleaning the wood frame of an old-fashioned chair I want to reupholster. I want to remove the old polish and dirt first but without removing the stain.

Blind man plans to take trip

LONDON (AP) — Mike Tetley, who was blinded during army service in Kenya, plans to return there and cycle 500 miles through wild country.

Not alone. He will be on the back seat of a tandem, with a partner who can see to steer the way.

Tetley, 44, lost his sight while serving in the Kenya Regiment and fighting the Mau-Mau rebels in the '50s.

As he lay in hospital in Nairobi, a Salvation Army officer visited him and gave him a Braille watch.

He came home to England and trained as a physiotherapist at St. Dunstan's, a rehabilitation center for the blind. At the same time he took up tandem cycling.

Now he is going back to Kenya to repay his debt to the Salvation Army. He plans to visit a Salvation Army school for the blind at Thika and demonstrate some of the things a blind man can do — including tandem cycling with a seeing partner.

"I enjoy tandem riding," Tetley said. "I've been doing it for several years now, and wherever I go on my tandem we attract attention.

"I thought that if we attracted notice in Africa, and it got around to the blind boys at the Salvation Army's school, it could do a lot of good."

Tandem cycling has a long tradition among sports for the war-blinded at St. Dunstan's. But this will be the first time anyone trained at the center has embarked on such a long ride.

Tetley has a regular cycling partner in Britain, Dennis Bray. But in Kenya he will be partnered by Edwin Rodrigues, a 25-year-old teacher who will meet him on arrival in Nairobi.

They plan to pedal out from Nairobi and ride 75 miles a day, making their way via Mombasa to Malindi in about six days. The route lies through Tsavo, notorious for man-eating lions.

"The lions stopped the construction of a railway for two years by gobbling up the workers," Tetley said.

"We should run across every form of big game, so I am taking some fire crackers to frighten them off."

Second annual firefighters ball scheduled

The second annual Sedalia Firefighters Ball will be held Oct. 11 at the National Guard Armory.

Fifty per cent of the proceeds from the event will be donated to the Children's Therapy Center, according to firefighter Robert Vogler.

The event will be in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week in Sedalia, Oct. 6-12.

Tickets may be obtained from any Sedalia firefighter.

Johnny Nace will be the featured performer.

Heart problems of rheumatic fever

Dear Dr. Lamb — My father died at age 47 from rheumatic heart disease. He had rheumatic fever as a child. When I was seven I went to the doctor with him for four months and took some medicine. After his death I didn't go to the doctor any more. My mother said I had rheumatic fever, but I have never been restricted in activity and have led a healthy and active life. I've never had any symptoms. I'm concerned because I've heard of people dying from bad hearts because the heart was damaged by rheumatic fever in childhood.

I have had routine examinations and two chest X rays where I work. If my heart was scarred or damaged in any way by rheumatic fever would this show on the X ray? Is there any test I could take now to show definitely that I had rheumatic fever as a child or not and how much damage it has done? I'm 20 years old. Should I have any symptoms now or what symptoms should I have had as a child?

Dear Reader — About the only way to tell if you had rheumatic fever as a child now is if it left any heart damage. Rheumatic fever may not cause any heart damage. The heart disease is a complication.

The sequence goes something like this. A streptococcal infection ("strep throat") may be followed by rheumatic fever — or it may not. If you have rheumatic fever as a complication of the strep throat then you may get the complication of heart involvement or you may not. If the heart is involved it may have residual damage that can progress to cause changes in the heart later — or the heart may recover completely.

Your father's illness began as a child, with streptococcal infection. Such a strep infection is contagious. The rheumatic heart disease he had afterward is not contagious. Apparently he was about 40 when you were born, so he would not likely have had anything that was contagious for you.

You can have rheumatic fever with few, if any, symptoms. The diagnosis sometimes has to be made upon an examination of the heart and certain blood tests. In other instances it causes fever, red hot swollen joints, generalized evidence of an infectious disease, and, if the heart is acutely involved, a variety of heart problems, including heart failure.

If the heart is involved, even with an unrecognized case of rheumatic fever, in later life the valves in the heart may be damaged. Incidentally a lot more can be done for these problems today than was possible even 15 years ago. In mild cases it takes more than an X ray to see the problem. The X ray may be entirely normal, but the doctor can hear a murmur or abnormal sound from your heart beat. The electrocardiogram can also be helpful. In cases with severe heart damage or seriously affected valves then the size and shape of the heart may be changed so that it is apparent on X ray.

Obviously, if you have no valve damage or significant damage to your heart it is unlikely that you would have any symptoms. Certainly if you have no symptoms and have never had any health problems you should not limit your activities in any way. Knowing that your father did not have a contagious disease when you were a child, that you were a child in the age when rheumatic fever was being prevented by antibiotics, and your lack of problems, I too doubt you ever had rheumatic fever. # Kansas Citian is charged in death of priest

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — William Roland Roberts, 37, of Kansas City, was charged Tuesday with larceny and murder in the death of a priest here two months ago.

Roberts, who is being sought, is accused in the death of Father Francis T. Donohue, 66, whose body was found tied to a bed in the rectory of St. John's Roman Catholic Church.

Authorities attributed death to a heart attack, but the murder charge stems from a North Carolina law making a death that occurs during the commission of a felony a murder.

Police said Father Donohue's empty wallet was found near the bed.

Police in Martinsburg, W. Va., obtained a warrant last Thursday charging Roberts in the abduction of another Roman Catholic priest, Father John J. O'Connell, and his housekeeper. Police said the two had been left for 78 hours in the trunk of a car.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Cripple Creek, Colo. was a boom town that yielded more than $400 million in gold ore. Bob Womack discovered the first gold there in Poverty Gulch in 1891, The World Almanac says. Ironically, Womack died poor but his discovery made 28 people millionaries and brought 30,000 people to the town. This Rocky Mountain town today has about 550 residents.

Cromley

"He had a strong decent face and something tough as the rubber in a handball to his make-up, but his eyes had been punched out a long time ago — they had the distant lunar glow of the small sad eyes you see in a caged chimpanzee or a gorilla. Even when hearty he gave an impression the private man was remote as an astronaut on a lost oribit."

That same look which divides off the inner Nelson Rockefeller from the public politician was evident when President Ford announced his nomination as vice president.

Unless Mr. Ford can penetrate this mask and come to some accommodation with the Rockefeller inside, the Ford administration and the Ford candidacy for president in 1976 may well come a cropper.

For Mr. Rockefeller, with all his success as governor, has been notoriously unsuccessful as a number two, three or four in coming to terms with the men he works for or through.

He quit the Eisenhower administration in strong disagreement over policy and proceeded to blast the Eisenhower approach in a series of documented public statements. He refused Ike's help in his gubernatorial campaign.

His first period of high office in the Department of State ended when Secretary Jimmy Brynes told President Truman either Rockefeller must go or Byrnes would.

In his maneuvering at the San Francisco United Nations charter sessions, he was so uncooperative with other members of the delegation he made an enemy of John Foster Dulles, who feared Rockefeller would wreck the UN aborning. In succession he feuded with Cordell Hull, Herbert Hoover Jr. and Averell Harriman.

For Nelson Rockefeller is not only high principled but astoundingly stubborn. Single handedly he forced the adoption of his civil rights and strong military defense beliefs on the 1960 Republican National Convention. And without noticeable stress (some say with considerable enjoyment) he persisted on the platform of the 1964 Republican National Convention when the vitriolic anger and violent heckling from the balconies in that convention would have driven most men from the stage.

If President Ford can win the inner Rockefeller and bring him into hands as a complete team player, the Rockefeller asset will be great indeed.

He is a top-flight administrator (where Mr. Ford has little experience), a first-rate attracter of able men (a Ford weakness), a proven performer on domestic problems (where some give Mr. Ford low marks) and has close ties with labor and civil rights leaders (whose suspicions of the President are well known).

Rockefeller delights in complex problems, in negotiations with difficult men and groups (he believes this is his strong point), and has a track record in practical finance, business and economic management, plus enormous private influence (aided by a family resources estimated at between $3 and $6 billion).

His "liberal" reputation in education, pollution abatement and aid for the poor will be a major asset when he and President Ford slash federal domestic spending, take hard looks at the way this nation's welfare and domestic assistance programs are run and concurrently push for strong national defenses, matters on which the two are in close agreement.

Inflation hits poor the worst

WASHINGTON — President Ford surely now senses the political peril that lurks for him in this country's sick economy.

Rowan

Vast millions of middle-class Americans are outraged because their incomes don't keep pace with rising prices; because they can't afford to educate their children the way they had expected to.

This average American family, with income of about $12,000 a year, is truly in a terrible bind. But it will have to get in line behind the nation's hungry poor before it can grasp the crying towel.

Since 1970 the federal government has increased spending on nutrition programs for the poor from $1.6 to $5.1 billion. But would you believe a study panel recently told the Senate Conference on National Food and Nutrition Policy that "our nation's needy have become hungrier and poorer" over the past three or four years?

It is a backward slide which ought to worry all of us for many reasons, not the least being the truth that this deeper hunger and poverty has ensured the failure of our highly-touted programs to reduce crime.

But why more hunger, you ask, when the government seemed to be moving toward a decent level of nutrition for all?

My colleague, David Mazie, reports that many factors are involved in the tragic worsening of the status of the poor. Sometimes it is unfair or callous administration of food stamps and school lunch programs. But perhaps the chief villain is inflation.

You and I may grumble about paying $2 for a pound of sirloin steak or $4 for a dozen kosher hot dogs. But it's the poor who are really getting clobbered by soaring food prices.

According to the Food Research and Action Center, which studied the situation for the Senate conference:

✓ The poor spend a bigger chunk of their total income on food — some 30 to 60 per cent, which is two or three times the proportion spent by the middle class and rich.

✓ When prices go up, the non-poor can change their buying habits and "spend down" to cheaper foods. But poor families are already eating the cheapest food items available, and when those go up, there's no place to turn.

✓ In fact, the "cheap" items have increased in price faster than foodstuffs bought by the affluent. Look at two of the basics in a low-income diet — rice and beans. Between December 1970 and March 1974 the cost of dried beans increased 256 per cent and rice 124 per cent, while steak rose only 39 per cent. During the same period, the price of margarine rose 63 per cent compared to a 9 per cent increase for butter. Other "poor-people" foods — frankfurters, pork sausage, bologna — went up 50 to 70 per cent while foods like lamb chops, broccoli, whole wheat bread showed increases of 15 to 40 per cent.

Despite improvements, federal food programs fall far short of need. Only two persons out of five who are eligible for food stamps are getting them, according to the Food Research and Action Center. And what they get is not enough. The Department of Agriculture's lowest-price diet plan for a family of four increased in cost 41.7 per cent in the last three years, but the food stamp benefits rose only 34 per cent.

We hear an endless stream of personal tragedies. Infants who are crippled for life by malnutrition. Ill-fed youngsters who fall behind in school. Elderly couples who resort to stealing canned goods off supermarket shelves.

The irony and sadness of a wealthy nation unable to feed its citizens was poignantly expressed by a Spanish-speaking farmworker in one of the fertile valleys of California, whose story was cited in testimony before the Senate conference.

"How beautiful it is to water a little tree and watch it flower and grow. It is a most beautiful sight. But when you have not water to give the little tree, it brings great sorrow to the heart to watch the flowers wither away while the tree slowly dies."

Dam mistakes

The Army Corps of Engineers is emerging a little red-faced from the controversy surrounding the Stockton Reservoir in Southwest Missouri.

Landowners have been up in arms over flooding of the Sac River below the dam, and especially over a Corps proposal to buy up 3,700 additional acres, thereby taking it out of production and off the tax rolls.

It has now been revealed that there was a slight error in the design of the dam, inasmuch as the Corps overestimated by about 100 per cent the volume of water that could be poured into the Sac without causing flooding.

When the electrical generators operate at more than two-thirds capacity, the water released floods crop and pasture land, erodes banks and does other damage.

The Corps is considering two courses of action. One would reduce the water flow to 5,000 cubic feet per second, a level the Sac could accommodate. That would reduce Stockton's generating capacity, however, to 30,000 kilowatts, compared to its design capacity of 52,000 kilowatts. The unused kilowatts the taxpayers shelled out for would represent so much water not over the dam, so to speak.

Another suggestion is to channelize the Sac so water would flow faster. But channelization, besides its serious environmental effects, usually succeeds only in passing the problem on to someone downstream.

There seems to be no easy solution. But in the interest of preventing such boondoggles in the future, we suggest the Corps of Engineers invest in some new slide rules.

Rural fires suspicious

Sunday night a mother of six children was killed in a mobile home fire in rural Pettis County, the fifth fire in that area in one year. A resident of the vicinity says there have been 10 serious fires in that part of the county southwest of Sedalia in the last eight years.

The state fire marshal's office plans to investigate the fires to see if there is a pattern to them. If so, arson will be a distinct possibility.

We hope the investigation will be a thorough and complete one. Certainly that many fires in such a relatively small area looks suspicious.

Behind the doors at Ford conference

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Not all congressional leaders are enthusiastic about President Ford's moves to tackle the nation's nagging economic problems.

In private, some have told us they don't think his conservative policies will prevent a recession. Some even fear his policies could bring on a depression similar to the 1930s.

But they are eager to cooperate with the new President. They raised only mild objections, therefore, when he called them behind closed White House doors to explain his economic moves.

The confidential minutes show he started out jovially by telling Speaker Carl Albert about his first night in the White House. "I might have slept better," he confided. "Guess I'm not quite used to it."

But he soon got down to business. "I will not recommend wage and price controls," he told the leaders bluntly. "I hope you can join me in this position."

He passed around a joint statement, which he invited them to endorse. This renounced "any legislation for either standby or mandatory wage-and-price controls."

The statement, he said, would head off any "anticipatory" wage or price hikes.

Speaker Albert commented that Congress "as a practical matter" wouldn't pass controls anyway. But he added: "I'd prefer that we should say that wage-and-price controls are out for the immediate future."

Sen. Robert Byrd, the Senate Democratic whip, also objected. "I like the idea of standby wage controls," he said.

But the President didn't even want standby controls. "I'm against it," he declared. "Congress is against it. Labor is against it."

We need to [illegible] and guidelines," suggested Rep. John McFall, the House Democratic whip.

White House economic adviser Herbert Stein didn't like the reaction of the Democratic leaders. "It's discouraging," he muttered. "If (this) is the sentiment, wage controls are possible."

"I don't see it that way," shot back McFall. "That's not what we're saying."

Economic counselor Kenneth Rush and budget director Roy Ash urged the President to put out an immediate strong statement against controls. "We must go ahead now or not at all," said Rush.

House Democratic leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill agreed. "You should make a flat statement that there will be no wage-and-price controls," he advised.

"I agree with Tip," said Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott.

The President moved on to a discussion of the budget. His "target objective," he said, was to hold the budget under $300 billion. "Without cuts now," he warned, "we'll go to $340 billion in 1976."

"With $330 billion or less in revenues," piped up Ash.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield reminded the President that government agencies had a habit of getting around budget cuts by coming back to Congress later with requests for supplemental appropriations.

"Congress reduces, and the agencies try to recoup by supplementals," he said. "We think Mr. Ash could do a lot to see that supplementals could be limited to new situations rather than recoupment."

President Ford wound up with a discussion of the "economic summit" that he is planning in late September or early October. He would start, he said, with some presummit meetings with business, labor, agriculture and consumer leaders.

"We want the unvarnished truth," the President vowed. "We've got to face up to certain economic fundamentals...Time is of the essence. We want visible evidence that people in government are doing something."

Some Democrats left the closed-door meeting, nevertheless, feeling that Ford may not be doing enough.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rank still has its privileges at Andrews Air Force Base where the 14-year-old daughter of a major general was arrested recently for shoplifting nail polish from the commissary. Next day, Col. Kenneth Gunnarson, then the base commander, tore up the arrest notice on grounds that her shoplifting was "an inadvertent act." ... Even some of Rep. Olin Teague's colleagues were astonished when he ordered his personal attack on Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., printed up at government expense. "Tiger" Teague, D-Tex., got so heated at McGovern's stand on veterans' rights that he accused McGovern of "intellectual dishonesty ... threats ... misleading statements" and politicking with vet issues. Customarily, members of Congress refrain from personal assaults on each other, particularly when the printed blast is paid for by the taxpayer ... Marine officials at Cherry Point, N.C., recently put into effect a stuffy dress code for leatherneck families: "Skirts higher than mid-thigh, hot pants, hair curlers, tank tops, and halter tops if they are see-through or expose the mid-riff" are banned on base. "Women must wear support garments on the upper part of the body — built-in bra will suffice." The directive does not say how the brass hats will check this requirement.

House speaker wins renomination

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Cecil Drummond of Pawhuska and Glenn English of Cordell emerged as the leaders of hotly contested Democratic races for U.S. House seats today, while four incumbents won renomination outright, including House Speaker Carl Albert.

John N. Happy Camp was the only incumbent to face a serious threat in the primary election, but he forged to a comfortable lead in the 6th District Republican race in balloting past midnight.

Albert won easily over two opponents in the 3rd District and thus was re-elected since he is unopposed in the general election. Besides Camp, Democrats John Jarman and James R. Jones were renominated in the 5th and 1st districts, respectively.

Drummond, a Pawhuska attorney and rancher, led five other candidates in the 2nd District Democratic primary. Bob Blackstock of Bristow held a slim lead over Ted Risenhoover of Tahlequah in a battle for the second runoff spot. With 336 of 612 precincts reporting, Drummond had 15,809 votes to 11,742 for Blackstock and 11,232 for Risenhoover. Trailing them were L. V. Watkins, Robert Collins and Jim Conrad.

The primary was necessary after incumbent Clem McSpadden of Chelsea relinquished his seat to run for governor.

Ralph F. Keen of Tahlequah was neck in neck in the Republican nomination for the 2nd District with Dorothy Stanislaus of Claremore. With 336 of 612 precincts in, Keen had 5,877 votes to 5,868 for Mrs. Stanislaus.

English, a Cordell petroleum landman, held a hefty lead over his two nearest challengers, former state Rep. David Hutchens of Hobart and Gary Green of Stillwater, in the 6th District Democratic primary.

With 581 of 699 precincts in, English had 25,347 votes to 16,757 for Hutchens and 15,872 for Green. Three other candidates trailed badly.

Both English and Drummond were making their first political races, but they are no newcomers to Oklahoma politics. Drummond, 34, was a member of the Democratic National Charter Committee and represented District 2 at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

English, 33, was chief assistant to the California State Legislature in 1967 and 1968 before becoming executive director of the Democratic party from 1969 to 1973.

Camp was ahead in the Republican race with an 18,880-14,409 lead over Leonard.

Winning nomination in the GOP race for the 1st District was George Alfred Mizer Jr. of Tulsa. With 334 of 353 precints reporting, Mizer had 21,663 votes to 10,022 for Ernest E. Clulow Jr., also of Tulsa.

Mizer will face Jones in the general election. Jones easily defeated Lawrence "Night-Train" Lane of Tulsa, leading 50,557-11,558 with 334 of 353 precincts reporting.

Albert, the dean of Oklahoma congressmen, ran away with the 3rd District race. With 484 of 735 precincts in, he had 75,675 votes to 11,333 for Marvin Davis Andrews of Sardis and 5,763 for Peryle H. Eastwood of McAlester.

Rep. John Jarman of Oklahoma City was winning handily again in the 5th District race. With 191 of 291 precincts in, Jarman had 31,614 votes to 10,035 for Robert C. Bright and 10,026 for Al Engle.

Says public must aid crime battle

CHICAGO (AP) — Police leaders say a major battle in the war on crime may be the fight to overcome public apathy toward solving crimes.

"Police are not the beginning and the end," said Detroit Police Chief Philip G. Tannian. "All the public has to share in the burden, but many turn and look the other way."

And Police Commissioner Donald D. Pomerleau of Baltimore, Md., said, "Society is on the defensive. In the final analysis, the police can't solve all the problems."

Sheriff Peter Pitchess of Los Angeles County put it more bluntly. He said "community apathy" poses a significant difficulty in solving crimes.

The three men gave their views on Tuesday after Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe warned a meeting of police leaders from 25 major metropolitan areas that "there is every possibility that crime will inundate us.

"The nation would then be faced with the prospect of falling apart or devising a national police force in one final effort to restore domestic order.... It would be a dreadful mistake to slide inch-by-inch toward that chasm...."

Saxbe also called for a crackdown on consistent offenders. He blamed the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration for inconsistent leadership in battling crime.

Saxbe advocated continued efforts to alleviate some causes of crime, such as poverty and employment. He said he supported rehabilitation work with first offenders.

He said that after a substantial decline in crime in 1972 and a steady pattern for the first nine months of 1973, FBI statistics show a 16 per cent increase in the final quarter of last year. An FBI report to be issued Sept. 6 shows crime increased 6 per cent in 1973 from the previous year, he added.

He said the trend continued for the first three months of 1974 with an increase of 15 per cent.

The police leaders praised Saxbe's statements as a realistic assessment of the problem of crime. They said they particularly agreed with a crackdown on consistent offenders.

Honolulu Police Chief Francis A. Keala said he enjoyed "having an attorney general who is being realistic about the problems of crime."

Seattle Police Chief Robert L. Hanson described the approach as "very, very refreshing.... It signals an end to permissiveness."

Most police leaders strongly supported Saxbe's desire to "work with the first offender who can be rehabilitated. For the hardened criminal, our job is to identify him, prosecute him and lock him up."

Gambling is rejected

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Although looking at times like a winner, pari-mutuel betting failed to make it across the finish line in Oklahoma Tuesday.

Voters in the state's primary election rejected a legislative proposal to permit pari-mutuel gambling on horse races on a county option basis by a margin of more than 24,000 votes, unofficial tabulation showed.

Two other proposals, eliminating the "silent vote" factor in future general election balloting on state questions carried by substantial majorities.

Defeated were proposals to reorganize the executive branch of state government; allow counties to levy an additional 2-mill tax to help finance county government; and remove residency requirements for voting in Oklahoma to comply with federal guidelines.

All of the questions were proposed amendments to the Oklahoma Constitution except the pari-mutuel issue. It was a statutory proposal submitted by the 1973 legislature.

The Anti-Crime Council of Oklahoma and Sooner Alcohol-Narcotics Education (SANE) led a heated campaign to defeat the pari-mutuel proposal.

The principal group backing the issue was the Oklahoma Horsemen's Association, headed by Chet Robertson, Yukon, brother of actor Dale Robertson.

With votes counted in 1,898 of the state's 3,040 precincts, pari-mutuel had 212,069 votes for passage and 236,589 against.

Robertson, who claimed his organization had more than 7,000 members representing a $1 billion industry," argued that Oklahoma could realize vast benefits from taxes and increased tourist trade if pari-mutuel betting was approved.

Opponents contended that pari-mutuel betting would open the door to organized crime in Oklahoma.

Plan to seek wage hikes

CHICAGO (AP) — Despite President Ford's hopes to jawbone wage and price increases, the United Transportation Union says it will seek wage hikes totaling 35 per cent in fall negotiations.

Al H. Chesser, president of the 250,000-member rail union, told a news conference on Tuesday that the group wants a 20 per cent hike in 1975 and 15 per cent more in 1976.

"Ford's request for (wage-price) restraint comes at a time that makes it most difficult," Chesser said. "We've had to live with this inflation."

Chesser criticized what he called enormous corporate profits and hikes in consumer prices such as General Motors' average increase of $416 for 1975 model cars.

"If we're going to hold down on the prices of consumer goods, that's something else," he said.

The United Transportation Union represents railroad operating personnel whose annual salaries range from $10,000 to $15,000. Negotiations on a new contract are to begin in Washington next month. The current two-year contract expires Dec. 31.

The Brotherhood of Railway, Airlines & Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express & Station Employes will seek a similar wage settlement, Chesser said. The two unions represent most U.S. rail employes.

Chesser also said the federal Department of Transportation is not properly enforcing railway safety regulations.

He warned that unless safety problems are resolved, he would not rule out strike action.

Players reject offer; will stay in camp

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — In football terms, the cooling-off period moved into overtime today, the latest proposal by the owners to end the National Football League Players Association strike was tackled hard at the line of scrimmage and there's a time out in the negotiations.

By a 25-1 vote Tuesday night, the NFLPA strongly rejected the owners' newest offer, but the players will remain in their training camps as the 14-day cooling off period has been indefinitely extended.

"We gambled the 14-day period would work. It didn't," Ed Garvey, executive director of the players union, told a press conference early today. "We wanted a good faith offer but they did not make the effort. This offer is hardly what we consider a good faith offer."

"The negotiations have been recessed," Bill Curry, union president, said. "It's been decided for the players to remain in camp and continue without an agreement."

Neither Garvey nor Curry, who announced the near-unanimous rejection, said which representative from the 26 NFL teams cast the dissenting vote.

"The negotiations have been called off and when the owners come up with a substantial offer, we'll go back," Garvey said. "We intend to remain flexible and we'll play it by ear. No, they didn't break the union. We feel it is stronger than ever.

W.J. Usery Jr., head of the federal mediation team, was saddened that the 14-day cooling-off period, which was his suggestion to the union, did not foster an agreement.

"I have encouraged both sides to play the season," Usery said. "I don't plan to call them back into negotiations in the near future — by that I mean the next few days.

The 14-day cooling-off period, which allowed veterans to enter training camp while negotiations in the prolonged labor dispute rolled on, went into overtime at 12 midnight, EDT Tuesday.

John Thompson, NFL Management Council executive director, said the crux of the 59-day labor dispute, the longest in the history of major professional sports, was still the so-called Rozelle rule in which the NFL commissioner can compensate a club for a player who plays out his option and signs with another team.

A modification of the owners' stance on the Rozelle rule was an important part of the new package delivered by the Management Council, bargaining unit for the 26 club owners.

The players' union had withdrawn its demands for abolition of the Rozelle rule earlier, saying it should be left up to the courts to decide.

Thompson said, however, that action was not viewed as "a concession on their part ... we are determined to resolve the Rozelle rule at the bargaining table."

The four-year contract proposed by management also included modifications of the option and waiver rules, an increase in the minimum salary level to $18,000 for veterans and $15,000 for rookies, plus a total of $25 million over the life of the agreement to pay for pensions and insurance. This is an increase of $5.9 million over the four-year commitment made in 1970.

KC loses ground to A's with split

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals slipped to 4½ games behind Oakland in the American League West by splitting a doubleheader with Cleveland Tuesday night, winning the finale 13-2, behind Nelson Briles five-hit pitching, after losing the opener 12-8.

The Royals poured across seven runs in the first inning of the second game. There were five hits, including a two-run triple by George Brett, one walk, an error, two wild pitches and a balk by Milt Wilcox, 2-2.

That was all the cushion needed by Briles, 4-5, although he lost a shutout in the eighth on Joe Lis' two-run homer. John Mayberry slugged his 20th homer of the year for Kansas City in the eighth.

Hal McRae had two doubles in the nightcap to go with his three two-baggers and homer in the opener. He drove in six runs in the first game and one in the second.

Kansas City's Steve Busby was foiled in his bid to become the second AL pitcher to win 20 games this year. Busby, 19-11, was tagged for nine hits and six runs in the first four innings but still was coaxing a 7-6 advantage into the seventh inning.

With one out, pinch-hitter John Ellis doubled and scored on Frank Duffy's single. Lindy McDaniel then came in for Busby. Duffy went to second on a sacrifice and scored on a double by Rico Carty, the designated hitter.

Ellis drove in three runs in the ninth with a triple with the bases loaded.

The Royals will have a tough time trying to gain ground on Oakland tonight as they face Cleveland's Gaylord Perry, 16-9. Al Fitzmorris, 10-3, has the starting assignment for Kansas City.

Huge payoff to go to Futurity winner

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Tiny's Gay is the glamour horse of the 10-horse field in Monday's All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, but it was Easy Six that showed the most in the trials.

Easy Six easily had the top qualifying time in the Aug. 23 trials. The colt covered the 440 yard distance in :21.60 to top the list of 10 qualifiers for the All-American.

The All American is the third leg of the Triple Crown of horse racing for quarter horses and is billed as the world's richest horse race with a total purse of $1.03 million.

The winning horse receives $330,000 with prize money scaled won to $27,000 for the horse finishing last.

Much of the attention going into the trials had gone to Tiny's Gay, who is unbeaten in 12 career starts including wins in the first two legs of the Triple Crown, the Kansas Futurity and the Rainbow Futurity. Those 12 triumphs have returned earnings of $306,720.

But Easy Six was 14 seconds better than Tiny's Gay in the qualifying round and established himself as a definite contender for the top prize Monday.

Easy Six has finished out of the money only once while picking up five firsts and two seconds to post career earnings of $77,455.

In winning his trial and posting the top time Easy Six bettered the performance of not only Tiny's Gay but also of 207 other horses that were entered in the 21 trials.

Hoskins quits at Missouri

By The Associated Press

Big Eight Conference football teams worked on routine Tuesday, what Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley called the "bread-and-butter stuff."

Stanley praised the efforts of fullbacks Robert Turner and George Palmer. "They're making a commitment to get to the hole," he said. "All our running backs are running better. Our passing game improves every day."

Missouri went through a routine practice getting ready for today's controlled scrimmage. Tailback Jorriel Williams missed the drill because of a sore leg and quarterback Ray Montgomery had to withdraw because of muscle spasms in the back.

Coach Al Onofrio said Dean Leibson or Bill Marx probably would move into the No. 3 tailback spot that became vacant when Chris Hoskins dropped out of school.

Kansas State Coach Vince Gibson said the Wildcats were "still bruised, but we had a good practice."

Fullback Roscoe Scobey was out of the hospital after being treated for a concussion and Billy Dickson and Tom Winchell, both tight ends, were nursing minor hurts but Gibson said, "We don't have any bad injuries."

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne was concerned over bumps end bruises reported by several players but said he would send the Cornhuskers through a scrimmage today.

However, Osborne said Tony Davis and Rich Bahe probably would miss the workout because of injuries. "We'll either work the No. 1 teams against each other or the No. 1 against the No. 2," the coach said.

Kansas Coach Don Fambrough took his Jayhawks to the artificial turf when rain hit Lawrence and stressed the passing game.

Cleveland's John Ellis, who reached safely with a bases-loaded triple in the ninth inning of the opening game during Tuesday night's doubleheader with the Royals in Kansas City, scores on Frank Duffy's grounder to short. Royals' shortstop Frank White's throw to catcher Fran Healy was high and Healy is shown trying to reach down tor the tag. The Indians won the opening game of the twinbill, 12-8, but Kansas City came back in the nightcap to post a 13-2 win. (AP Wirephoto)

Raceoff at DuQuoin

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — Twenty-two 3-year-old trotters gathered on the Du Quoin State Fair's oval track this afternoon for the 49th running of the annual Hambletonian Stakes.

The winner was to take home $80,075 of the record $160,150 purse.

Since Sunday's post-position drawing, the trotter most often talked about has been Golden Sovereign, a chestnut colt owned by Ohioans Phil Drake of Columbus and Kathryn Richardson of Painville, and driven by her husband Richard Richardson Jr.

The crowded field pushed the race into two division for the second time in its history. The top five in each division were to meet in a third-heat raceoff. If a previous heat winner failed to place first, the three heat winners were to meet in a fourth to determine the stakes' winner.

Cards lose full game to Bucs in East race

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' Lou Brock finds it easy to explain why he waited until he was 35 years old to assault Maury Wills' major league record of 104 stolen bases in one season.

"When I was younger, I didn't know some of the things I know now, and I didn't have this man (Ted Sizemore) hitting behind me," Brock said Tuesday night after stealing his 89th base in a game San Diego won from the Cardinals, 3-1.

Brock recalled that as long ago as 1965, he purchased d $500 movie camera and started filming the moves various pitchers made to first base.

"The movies taught me a lot of things to look for," he said after the Cardinals dropped a game and a half behind front-running Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Brock was asked, "If you could start to work now, teaching a 23-year-old Lou Brock what you know about base stealing, how long would it take for him to master everything you know?"

"Three years," he replied, "if we worked hard at it. "I think I could teach an average to above-average runner how to steal 60 bases a season."

The Padres played spoilers Tuesday night, beating the Cardinals for the fifth time in 10 meetings this year. They did it on bases-empty homers by Willie McCovey and Dave Winfield, a run-scoring single by Dave Hilton and clutch pitching by Dan Spillner, 6-8.

Spillner, a rookie right-hander, allowed nine hits but broke a personal five-game losing streak and gained his first victory since July 9. He gave up a run-scoring single to Ted Simmons in the sixth inning but was helped out of jams by double plays with runners at third base in the fourth and sixth frames.

The loss in a swift one hour and 49 minutes was a cruel one for veteran righthander Bob Gibson, 7-12, who allowed only four hits and three walks.

Campbell needs 25

'Old men' take over in amateur

RIDGEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Bill Campbell has been playing in the U.S. Amateur Golf Championship for more than half his life — 31 years to be exact.

Ed Tutwiler, a 35-year-old luxury car dealer from Indianapolis, has played in the national event 16 times.

Campbell, a 51-year-old insurance agent, won the event 10 years ago, while the title has eluded Tutwiler.

The tournament, being played this week on the par-71, 6,754-yard Ridgewood Country Club, offers the two men a chance to compete with the future stars of the professional golf tour.

Tutwiler, who lost to Campbell in the 1964 finals, says he's too old to win and feels "it gets harder and harder for me to get up and want to play."

But Campbell, who played 25 holes of golf Tuesday before knocking off Warren Coates of Williamsport, Pa., in second-round action, says he's here to win.

According to Campbell, who faced Jed Jennings of Redmond, Wash., in today's third round, there are two main factors in playing a major match-play event like the Amateur. "There's the physical endurance and then there's your nerves," said Campbell.

There are 18-hole matches in store Thursday morning and afternoon, with more of the same on Friday. The finalists will meet in a 36-hole contest Saturday.

If Campbell and Tutwiler should falter, chances are a couple of other well-known "oldtimers" like Bill Hyndman, 58, of Huntingdon Valley, Pa., and Dick Siderowf of Westport, Conn., will be standing by to pick up the slack.

Siderowf, 37, two-time Walker Cup member, won his first match 8 and 7. He hasn't played an 18-hole match yet.

Hyndman, current USGA Senior Amateur titlist, had a tough 20-hole, 1 up victory over Robert Hoyt of Houston on Monday, but came back Tuesday to beat Bruce Furman of Waterloo, Iowa, 3 and 1.

A couple of upsets were recorded Tuesday as the field was reduced to 64 contestants.

Jay Haas, a 20-year-old student from Belleville, Ill., was turned back by Tim Brauch, 22, of Lafayette, Colo., 3 and 1. Haas is a member of Wake Forest's NCAA championship team.

Henri deLozier, a 27-year-old lawyer from Hyattsville Md., who was a quarter-finalist in the 1973 Amateur, was defeated by Peter Jacobsen, 20, of Portland, Ore., this year's Far Western Intercollegiate champ.

In other action, Larry Lis, a 23-year-old construction worker from Avella, Pa., who knocked off defending champ Craig Stadler of La Jolla, Calif., on Monday 1 up, lost to Bill Sibbick of Martinsville, Va. by the same score.

Vinnie Giles of Richmond, Va., Amateur winner in 1972, bested Bob Allen of Yardley, Pa., 4 and 3, while NCAA individual champ Curtis Strange of Virginia Beach, Va., nipped Art Nash of Kent, Ohio, 2 and 1.

Malone close to signing

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Whiz kid Moses Malone appeared on the verge today of becoming the first player ever to go directly from high school into professional basketball — if, indeed, he hadn't already done it.

A source close to the 19-year-old Petersburg High School star said Tuesday night Malone already had signed with the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association, but Malone refused early today either to confirm or deny the report.

It was learned, however, that Malone, his mother and three executives of the ABA team were booked on an Eastern Air Lines flight leaving nearby Richmond for New York this morning. And the ABA tentatively scheduled a 2 p.m. EDT, news conference in New York at the Americana Hotel, presumably to introduce Malone.

Jim Bukata, the league's new public relations director, said in New York he would not announce the news conference formally until he knew Malone had been signed.

Three executives of the Stars — Jim Collier, president; Arnie Ferrin, general manager; and Bucky Buckwalter, player personnel director — reportedly left Washington about 8:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday en route here.

Malone, who averaged 35.8 points and 25 rebounds per game in leading Petersburg to its second successive state championship this past season, was due to have begun classes today at the University of Maryland, which won the college recruiting war for his services.

The news Malone had signed or was about to sign a contract, which a high ABA source in New York said was in excess of $3 million spread over a 13-year period, brought Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell and his staff hurriedly to this South Central Virginia city Tuesday night.

It was learned Malone met with Driesell during the evening, but he declined comment on the session when he talked briefly with newsmen on his second visit to his small frame house in a low-income section.

"The latest news will come out tomorrow and it's going to be me who makes the decision. You all will hear about it," Malone told newsmen.

Washington keys Sooners as OU awaits '74 season

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Joe Washington, Oklahoma's super running back, wanted to be a fullback but nature double-crossed him.

"I always thought I'd be 6-foot-2 and weigh 220 pounds so that I could be a fullback and run over people," the elusive Sooner flash told Big Eight Skywriters Tuesday.

"I should have looked at my Dad and known different."

Washington, a 5-10, 178-pounder who led the Big Eight Conference in rushing with 1,173 yards last season, now has another goal — three of them, in fact — and knows that he's the fellow who has the say this time.

"I'd like to gain 2,000 yards this year," said the fleet junior. "And it's true, I'd like to win the Heisman Trophy and be an All-American."

If Washington accomplishes what he hopes to do, it's very likely the explosive Sooners will win all of their 11 games, repeat as Big Eight champions and achieve another Washington ambition for Oklahoma, to win the national football championship.

Washington is confident about his running ability.

"When I realized I couldn't be a fullback," Washington said, "I started running like a halfback. I run with a fluid motion at times. Occasionally, I surprise myself. When I'm caught on a long run, it's usually by somebody I don't see. He gets me from behind."

Sooner Coach Barry Switzer described Washington as one of Oklahoma's two super stars on offense and the greatest Sooner running back since Switzer appeared on the scene eight years ago as an assistant coach.

Turning to the team as a whole, Switzer said the Sooners "will be better on offense than last year. I don't think we've got a weak player on our offensive squad. Our offense returns 19 of 22 players from last year.

"I don't think we'll be the football team we were last year because we were a super defensive team last year. Seven defensive starters graduated."

The Sooners, beginning their second year of probation for recruiting violations, may miss fullback Waymon Clark, who a week ago was booted off the squad because of his off-the-field activities. Clark made 1,014 yards rushing in 1973. His place will be filled by junior Jim Littrell or freshman Calvin Harris.

Two lettermen will man the other backfield posts, surprising Steve Davis, second in the league in total offense at quarterback, and Grant Burget, halfback.

The offensive line should be a dandy with Wayne Hoffman and Tinker Owens at end, Jerry Arnold and Mike Vaughan at tackles, John Roush and Terry Webb at guards, and Kyle Davis at center. Owens, who paced the Sooner receivers in 1973, is Switzer's other super star on offense.

The defense doesn't appear as weak as the picture Switzer paints. By his own admission, Switzer has four super stars as a nucleus, the Selmon brothers, Dewey and LeRoy, both tackles; linebacker Rod Shoate and safety Randy Hughes.

There's a letterman in every other post, Pat Hussey at safety, Tony Peters and Eric Van Camp at the cornerbacks, Ron Waters and Jimbo Elrod at the ends, Gary Gibbs at linebacker and Glen Comeaux at nose guard. Not only that, some of the reserves are lettermen.

"I can tell by the time we play Texas in our fourth game Oct. 12 how good we'll be and how we'll do in the Big Eight," Switzer concluded. "I'd like to play a lot of people in our early season games and evaluate the players."

Switzer was asked whether he thinks the Sooners would finish 11-0 if they beat Texas.

Jane Blalock awarded $4,500 from LPGA

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Members of the Ladies Professional Golf Association were careful in commenting on the announcement in Atlanta that Jane Blalock had been awarded $4,500 damages.

Miss Blalock originally sued the LPGA for $5 million for suspending her in May, 1972, on grounds that she cheated in a tournament. She later amended the suit, omitting the $5 million but listing the $4,500 she might have won had she been allowed to finish the tournament.

"That's more than she deserves," said one player, who asked that her name not be used. "We didn't want her to win because now she can sue us (LPGA) for attorney fees."

LPGA members are in Kansas City for the Southgage Open which opens Friday.

Those who wanted anonymity on the Blalock case were following advice of counsel who feared open comment might hurt the LPGA position.

The LPGA has announced plans to appeal. Another player commented that "nothing is ever proved in something like this except the lawyers make a lot of money."

Opening lead—K♦

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Yesterday we said that you definitely should not open one spade with four cards each in spades and clubs. Our general rule for other hands with two four-card suits is when you hold four diamonds and four clubs to open one club; with four hearts and four diamonds to open a diamond, unless your hearts are very good; with clubs and either major to open one club and with spades and hearts to open one heart.

In addition we also open three-card club suits with hands like today's. We do hold four cards each in spades and hearts but have no interest in either suit unless our partner can produce four cards there.

It is fairly easy to arrive at four hearts after the club opening. It is even easier to get there after a one-heart opening by North, but any four-card majorite would open the North hand with one spade. The heart suit just might be missed as the bidding went forward.

Not that the heart suit should be missed. Any two bidders should reach that heart game on any system and would wind up losing two diamonds and one heart.

What do you do now?

A—Bid five spades. Your partner has shown a very good hand, but there might well be two quick diamond losers.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner continues to six notrump. What do you do now?

Governor's race into runoff

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—U. S. Rep. Clem McSpadden and State Rep. David Boren headed into a runoff campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination Wednesday after ruining Gov. David Hall's reelection bid in a Tuesday election that produced a record primary vote.

McSpadden held a slim lead over Boren with several thousand votes still to be counted, but Boren, a 33-year-old former Rhodes scholar who came from obscurity to strongly contend for the lead, will be a formidable runoff foe.

The winner of their Sept. 17 runoff will face State Sen. James Inhofe of Tulsa in the general election. Inhofe was an easy winner over former State Sen. Denzil Garrison in the Republican primary.

With more than 100 precincts still out, 650,000-plus votes already had been tabulated, surpassing the old primary record of 642,000 set in 1938.

McSpadden held a narrow 7,000-vote lead over Boren with 2,903 of 3,041 precincts reporting. Hall was a distant third. The totals were: McSpadden, 223,888; Boren, 216,882, and Hall, 160,126.

With 2,673 precincts reporting in the Republican primary, Inhofe had 82,895 votes to Garrison's 57,884.

Hall, 43, was never in the race. The former Tulsa County prosecutor, elected on a law-and-order platform four years ago, was crippled by indictments against several of his aides and a lengthy federal grand jury probe of alleged kickbacks on state contracts.

Both McSpadden and Hall had predicted they would win the nomination without a runoff, but Hall didn't even make the runoff and McSpadden, who had been expected to forge far ahead with Boren and Hall fighting it out for second place, wound up chasing Boren most of the night before finally edging ahead.

In fact, many observers already are saying Boren is the favorite in the runoff because of the momentum he has established. Boren organized a "broom brigade to sweep out the old-guard politicians" and his strategy paid off handsomely.

McSpadden carried 47 of the state's 77 counties, but Boren, who led in 21 counties, carried most of the big ones and ran away with the lead in Oklahoma County. He also held McSpadden to a slim bulge in Tulsa County, which had been considered a McSpadden stronghold.

Boren keyed his campaign to issues and the need for reform in state government. He made walking tours throughout the state and built up name recognition while finding out what was concerning the voters.

He predicted early today his momentum will earn him a runoff victory. "We just have to get in there and work," he said. "I had expected a close three-way race and the tremendous vote was a very humbling experience for me."

He urged teachers and others who had supported Hall to join his campaign and pledged he would stay on "the same positive course we have followed throughout this campaign."

He said he will continue to campaign on the need to open up state government "so the people can see what is going on."

McSpadden appeared before his Oklahoma City supporters late Tuesday and predicted he will win the runoff, but most of his aides had hoped Hall would be their opponent if a runoff was necessary.

Hall refused to concede defeat early today. "I'm going to go home, got to bed and wait until all the votes are in and then examine what our position is," he said.

Hall appeared cheerful as he met with his supporters, but his watch party was a glum affair for most of the night. Hall had trailed in the 1970 general election until the rural vote saved him. His supporters were hoping for another rural miracle this time, but it never materialized.

Inhofe, a 39-year-old Tulsa insurance company executive, built up his victory margin over Garrison in Oklahoma and Tulsa counties, where nearly half of the Republican votes were cast. He lead by about a 2-to-1 margin in both the large counties.

If Boren does win the Democratic nomination, he will be a double tough opponent for Inhofe because the GOP nominee, back in the early days when it looked like Boren was hopelessly behind McSpadden and Hall, praised Boren frequently as "an honest man who would make a good governor."

At one meeting when Inhofe put in such a plug for Boren, he was asked what he would do if he had to run against Boren in the general election. "It would be a tough choice," he quipped, "but I think I would still vote for me."

GM releases 1975 prices

DETROIT (AP) — Car buyers will be paying up to 14.5 per cent more for a new car from General Motors this fall, including a 10.3 per cent boost in the price of the Chevrolet Impala, the nation's best selling car.

And according to a 1975 model base price list released Monday, GM's three new sporty subcompacts will list for about $4,000 each.

Of the 176 models in GM's lineup this fall, only two will list for under $3,000. Both are Vegas.

GM's lowest-priced car, the two-door Vega sedan, is going up $295 or 11.8 per cent to $2,799. The most expensive GM car, the Cadillac Fleetwood four-door limousine, will cost $14,570 this fall, up $1,316 or 9.9 per cent.

The base price list gives the manufacturer's suggested retail price for each model, not including options, shipping charges or state and local taxes.

Last week GM said the price increase on its equipped 1975 models would average $416 or 8.2 per cent. That figure included an average $70 rollback from a price increase announced the week before and took into account popular options ordered with each model.

GM said options are going up an average 2.8 per cent in price across the line.

GM, the auto industry's price leader, is the first car maker to disclose 1975 base prices for each model. Its competitors, Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motors, are expected to raise prices in line with those set by GM.

According to the base price list, GM cars will be going up between 3 and 14.5 per cent, with the new compacts reflecting the largest increases. Most models will be going up eight to 12 per cent.

For example, the lowest-priced compact Chevrolet Nova is going up $407 or 14.5 per cent to $3,218, and the compact Pontiac Ventura coupe is going up $414 or 14.3 per cent to $3,306. The compact Oldsmobile Omega coupe will cost $3,435 this fall, up $392 or 12.9 per cent.

The lowest-priced Chevrolet Impala, the No. 1 seller in the country, will cost $4,561 this fall, a $426 or 10.3 per cent increase. Similarly, the full-size Pontiac Catalina, will be up $435 or 10.4 per cent to $4,625.

Chevrolet's new sporty subcompact Monza will list for $3,966, $1,000 more than the Vega and $300 more than the sporty compact Camaro, which the Monza resembles in a smaller package. The 8-cylinder Camaro will cost $3,698, up $332 or 9.9 per cent.

Dog kennels may be traded in for pool

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House cat sleeps easier today.

Administration strategists, U.S. Park Service officials, the Secret Service and the Fine Arts Commission are casting an eye to the air-conditioned dog kennels as the best spot for a new pool for President Ford.

If the pool is built at the current kennel site, in a thick clump of trees on the South Lawn, it would be only steps from the President's Oval Office.

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson had the luxurious kennels constructed for his beagles. And former President Richard M. Nixon had an Irish setter.

The Fords have no dogs. Shan, the Siamese cat brought to the White House by daughter Susan Ford, has the full run of the family part of the mansion.

The dog kennels area is good for a swimming pool because shrubs and trees seclude it from public view, said Charles Atherton, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission.

Two important objectives would be met: aesthetic and security.

But, Atherton said, the site is limited, so early plans call for a 30-or 35-foot pool. There would be a removable bubble-type top — "something like a greenhouse," said Atherton.

Also under consideration is a small dressing cubicle so Ford would not have to dash from the White House to the pool in a bathrobe.

Ford left behind at his Alexandria, Va., home a 20-by-40 foot pool that he used for morning and evening dips. Ford claims it kept his waistline trim. His wife says it kept his disposition pleasant.

This weekend the President is slated to go for his first swim since officially moving into the White House over a week ago. That will be at Camp David, the presidential retreat that has two pools.

Abductor is scared by aunt

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — An 8-year-old girl, abducted on the way home from school, was released unharmed by the kidnaper when her aunt saw the man and girl in a parking lot and began screaming.

The man put the child out of his car and sped away, sideswiping another car as he drove out of the parking lot at a supermarket.

The girl, Rhonda Gipson, said the man, in a white car, stopped and offered her a dollar if she would get in the car and show him the way to Merriam Lane. Rhonda got in.

Another girl ran to the home of Rhonda's aunt, Mrs. Jessie Armstrong, and told her what had happened.

Mrs. Armstrong, 36, telephoned Rhonda's mother, Mrs. Beverly Gipson, then got in her car and started driving around the neighborhood. She saw her niece and the man in the parking lot. She said she intended to ram into the white car, but in her excitement she stopped short and jumped out and started screaming. The man fled.

Police said they had no indication there was any connection with Rhonda's abduction and the disappearance July 7 of Lizabeth A. Wilson, 12. No trace has been found of the Wilson girl.

Suit seeking vote recount is dismissed

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP)—A suit seeking a recount of votes in the Democratic state senate primary race between state representatives Winifred Weber and Jack Gannon has been dismissed.

Mrs. Weber, who lost the 22nd District to Gannon by 56 votes, sought a recount on grounds that fraud and misconduct had occurred in the tallying of the ballots.

But St. Louis County Circuit Judge George W. Cloyd, after hearing testimony from Mrs. Weber's witnesses, dismissed the suit Tuesday, agreeing with Gannon's attorneys that no irregularities or misconduct had been proven.

Author's hostility to his mother an important factor in his work

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If he knew then what he knows now, Louis Sheaffer doubts he'd ever ever have put the giant drama jigsaw together.

"Despair, frustration, panic" are some of the words with which he describes creation of the two-volume life of Eugene O'Neill that recently won the 1974 Pulitzer Prize for biography.

Sheaffer, who calls himself "not an especially good" ex-journalist, spent 17 quietly obsessed years and 90,000 arduously raised dollars compiling the monumental narrative about America's most famous playwright.

"When it was over I felt like an orphan," the modest, intense Boswell describes the emotional letdown after his long, dark journey into his hero's complex psyche.

Piled up around him in a book-tumbled bachelor lair, Sheaffer estimates, is "50 times as much material as went into" the published 600,000-word manuscript.

"My collection is my future," he says of plans for possible spinoff works. A book of the pictorial material assembled during his hunt for everything about O'Neill is already being discussed with a publisher.

"I'd like to branch out and do someone else," he says, "but that would be starting in kindergarten, and I'm a little too old for that class."

For seven years, however, Sheaffer persisted — "it was basic detective work, with luck and persistence."

An occasional anonymous tip or a faint trial would suddenly open an unsuspected rich source of information. In Buenos Aires he located a man who was O'Neill's shipmate on early travels.

"I was in a race with mortality," Sheaffer says, "because most who could talk about him were in their 70's or 80's.

"You never knew who would be helpful. For a long time I felt I was ice skating over his life."

A pivotal conclusion he reached concerned O'Neill's ambivalent attitude about his parents, long accepted as a profound influence on his work.

"When I started I took it for granted, as everyone else had, that his hostility was directed toward his father. (James O'Neill was a noted 19th century bravura actor.) Then I talked with those who really knew him and realized central hostility was against his mother.

"That explained a great deal about his relations toward his own wives. And there was his repudiated Catholicism, which directly related to how he felt about his mother.

"He was a man staggering under a load of guilt all his life. He felt his birth had been responsible for his mother becoming a drug addict, and that led to his hostility toward her — because she bequeathed him that lifelong legacy of guilt."

Sheaffer feels that importance of the antimother discovery has been neglected by many reviewers of his work. He also wishes "more attention were given to the book's readability then to its scholarship." He takes a newspaperman's pride in having a lively style.

Accumulation of all the background data sent Sheaffer into a tangential maze, struggling to learn how to index and assemble bits in proper relevancy. For seven years he searched, traveled and sorted before putting paper in typewriter. Creative anguish set in.

"The danger of writing biography is that you may project yourself onto your subject.

"Sometimes I'd rewrite a paragraph 15 or 20 times. It's like drilling for oil. You think you've got the bit as deep as you can get. Then suddenly, at times, there's a moment of exhilaration as the drill goes down further, and you come up with the thought that clarifies."

Six grants from private foundations and the National Endowment for the Humanities sustained him, plus help from his family in hometown Louisville, Ky., when funds on hand got perilously low.

"As the years piled up, I became panicky more than once at thought of the great chunk of my life that O'Neill's life was costing me. But I had to take all the time necessary to do my best."

Sheaffer amiably disputes praise of "O'Neill, Son and Playwright" and "O'Neill, Son and Artist" as definitive works.

He is keenly aware that the dramatist and his last wife, Carlotta Monterey, locked up in the Yale University library under 25-year embargo a trove of personal documentation. Among the material are diaries O'Neill kept from his bohemian days in Greenwich Village through two decades of endeavor.

The interdict ends in 1978. Will he be there? The pale blue eyes glint with unquenched enthusiasm for further investigation.

"I can't help it," says Sheaffer.

Interviewer has rough job

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For my dough Robert Cromie has a rough job. He has to interview people who write books. Everyone knows authors are reclusive, painfully introverted souls for whom speaking is sheer agony.

Balderdash, says Cromie, the host of public television's half-hour "Book Beat" show, which starts its 10th year on public TV next October.

"Although I've heard people deny it, most authors are beautiful talkers, very articulate people. I would say you'd never have any problem with them 25 out of 26 times," he says.

Cromie retired last March as a columnist on the Chicago Tribune, which he joined in 1936. He's run the gamut of newspapering — general assignment, war corresponding, sports reporting and editing the Tribune's book section.

He's also host of "Book Beat," produced by station WTTW in Chicago.

Last season, Cromie said, "Book Beat" left its Chicago base for the first time for a series of interviews on the East Coast with humorists Frank Sullivan and P.G. Wodehouse, mystery writer Rex Stout, novelist Heinrich Boll and pianist Arthur Rubenstein.

He said he usually doesn't want those of the literary world who are "schlepping the book" — appearing on "Today" and any other show that'll have them.

"We try to stay away from them unless there's something awfully special about them," he says.

Has he ever run across a scrivener who really was a bad interview?

"I had one when I was just starting out," Cromie laughed, declining to name the man. "He was a writer of very funny books, but very slight books. He was my most traumatic experience.

"It wasn't his fault, really, but he had a book without much substance to it. I ran through questions about the book fairly quickly, and then I started floundering and fumbling around.

"It got so bad, I began to say things like, 'Well, who does your typing for you?' It was a searing experience."

Convict on furlough is gunned down

WELLSTON, Mo. (AP) — A convict on furlough from prison was gunned down as he stepped out of a car here Monday in what police said might be a case of mistaken identity.

Clarence Eddington, 39, was killed after five shots were fired from a late model Cadillac, which then sped away, police said.

Eddington was on furlough from a Southern Illinois prison and was due to return there Monday night, officers said.

Witnesses told police the shots were fired from a car occupied by three men and a woman. Authorities said the shooting may have been drug-related and Eddington may have been killed in a case of mistaken identity.

Eddington had served 10 years in prison in connection with the 1962 fatal shooting of an East St. Louis, Ill., policeman after a drugstore holdup, police said.

Watson fellows hard-working achievers in their own curious ways

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — One winner of the fellowship went off in search of the elusive dugong, the mammal upon which the mermaid legend was founded.

Another said he'd like a year in which to redesign the French horn. Another is retracing the South American portion of Darwin's Beagle voyage, and yet another has been off living with the pygmies in Zaire for the past two-and-a-half years.

One former recipient described it as a "great program for promising weirdos." Some stuffed-shirts in academia find it a trifle frivolous and the former executive director says it's the most unIBMish, uncomputerized fellowship he's ever heard of.

Funny he should phrase it that way. For the fellowship is The Watson, named after Thomas J. Watson Sr., the man who created IBM and instilled into every American a fear of folding, spindling or mutilating.

The fellowship is good for $7,000 for a postgraduate year of independent study and travel aboard. The 70 annual recipients must have graduated from the 35 top colleges and universities that are in the program.

Neither neatness nor grades count. Nor practicality nor results. A report is "required" at the end of the year, but it can be a page-and-a-half account, a sort of what-I-did-on-my - summer - vacation - that - lasted-a-year. Or you can forget about it all together, since no one but the executive director and the administrative assistant will ever read it anyway.

As the brochure puts it: "The Foundation hopes to provide Fellows an opportunity for a focused and disciplined Wanderjahr of their own devising — a break in which they might explore with some thoroughness a particular interest, test their aspirations and abilities, view their lives and American society in greater perspective and, concomitantly, develop a more informed sense of international concern."

"It's a program that is willing to take a chance on a student," says Dr. Robert Schulze, the first executive director and now the dean of arts and sciences at the University of Northern Colorado.

The fellowship is the brainchild of the four Watson children, memorializing a father who saw the ramifications of internationalism shortly after the first guns of World War I had quieted.

It is said that when Thomas Watson Jr. was a student at Brown University here, and his father was already Mr. IBM, the professors there either genuflected before him or treated him like dirt. Your basic rich kid syndrome. But there was one, Samuel T. Arnold, who treated him as a person in his own right. He was willing to take a chance on this rich kid as an individual and not as the heir apparent to the IBM fortune.

"Heir to the IBM fortune?" Watson chortles today. "At that point he was the only person who believed I would even live."

Watson first established the Arnold Fellowship, just for Brown students, in memory of the professor who was willing to take a chance on him.

Watson, his brother, Arthur, the former ambassador to France, and their two sisters then decided to honor their father with a similar program, the Watson. The fellowship, begun in 1968, is endowed through the will of their mother.

"Father was an internationalist of some reputation," says Watson, who eventually did take over the reins at IBM. Recently retired, he remains chairman of the executive committee of the board of directors.

The scholarship program, the family thought, would be appropriate to the man who worked to get IBM started abroad in the late teens and early 20's.

Freewheeling it is, and Watson has no regrets. "We talked with a number of professors and we felt that if we picked the right students, it would be better to let them go off alone."

Dr. Daniel Arnaud, the executive director, adds: "In a bizarre sort of way, we're not interested in results in the traditional sense. If we were looking for the definitive study on any of these programs we would send graduate students, or scientists or professionals in the field. We are most interested in the individual, not the results."

Barnett's report to Arnaud is not yet shaking the earth. In fact, he overlooked enclosing a copy of pictures.

"Yeah, I've been meaning to do that," he explains.

Once a leader of a jazz band won the award. He took the band and was back home in two months, funds gone. On the other budgeting extreme is the young man in Zaire, there for two-and-a-half years now. So how much can it cost to take a pygmy to lunch?

The Watson has not been ripped off. "It's an operation completely based on trust. We've been lucky," says Arnaud.

They watch over the Watson

Daniel L. Arnaud, Executive Director, and administrative assistant Dorothy F. Campbell are shown at work at the Thomas J. Watson Foundation in Providence, R.I. A map pin points fellowship recipients doing their thing around the globe. Reports of previous winners fill the file drawers. The six-year-old fellowship has enabled 400 young men and women to pursue their dreams with more than $2.5 million in stipends. (AP)

Rains have relieved many areas

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Rains the past few weeks have brought relief to drought conditions in many areas of the state and the Missouri Crop and Reporting Service said "more than half the state now reports adequate soil moisture supplies."

It's report Monday said there were a few scattered reports of disease and insect problems in the northern half of Missouri.

Four days last week were suitable for field work, but pastures still are mostly poor to fair, the service said.

The corn crop was in mostly poor to fair condition, with 43 per cent in the dented stage. That compares with 36 per cent last year and a five-year average of 54 per cent for this time of year.

The grain sorghum was 75 per cent headed, as compared to 84 per cent last year, and the soybean crop was in fair to good condition with 48 per cent setting pods.

The cotton crop was in fair to good condition, with less than 1 per cent of the bolls opening, and the harvest of the third cutting of alfalfa was 52 per cent complete, less than the 70 per cent last year.

Ann Landers

It's never too late for widow to move

Dear Ann Landers: You really let a lot of us down. I refer to the advice you gave to the weeping widow who sold her lovely home and is miserable living with children who don't want her. "And now it's too late," she moaned. TOO LATE, HELL! It's NOT too late, and you should have told her so.

If a widow sells her lovely home she must have money in the bank, or somewhere. Some widows receive pensions or social security. So why didn't you urge the weak-kneed granny to move out if she feels like a housekeeper and maid and is afraid to open her mouth for fear of "interfering"?

I know it can be done because I did it. Here's how:

I have a $10,000 "rainy day" fund and live on $375 a month. I found an apartment complex with people my own age. (When you see an ad that says "no children," it's usually an ideal place for widows and widowers.)

There is no such thing as "too late." That miserable widow should move out, find new friends, get a hobby or a part-time job. To stay in a home with children who make her feel as if she is imposing is nuts, and please tell her I said so. Sign me — Alone and Happy

Dear Happy: I should tell her? After YOUR letter?

Thanks for the gutty, right-on approach. It takes courage to do what you did and I doff my bonnet to you, lady.

Dear Ann Landers: I was touched by the letter from the girl in the wheelchair. Although my husband is not in a wheelchair, he is, in a sense, a member of that group. His lower back is fused and his hips are locked. He must spend the rest of his life on crutches, or his "stepbrothers," as he calls them. But he is the sweetest, most gentle, loving and brightest man I have ever met.

We had a wonderful three-week honeymoon touring New England. He drove a hand-controlled car. If you didn't see the crutches lying across the back seat, you'd never know the driver was handicapped.

May I repeat what you said, Ann? Perhaps from a woman who is married to a man on crutches, it might have more impact. I just wish everyone could be as happy as we are. Most handicapped folks have a special need for love and an extraordinary capacity to give it! Usually they are thrilled to be alive because they have gone through a great deal more than the healthy person who takes his legs and arms for granted.

Please, Ann, tell them again to look in a wheelchair (or on a pair of crutches) for a sweetheart. That perfect mate could be the one you passed by because he (or she) was handicapped. — Lucky Me

Dear Lucky You: Thank you for a heart-warming letter. I hope your beautiful words will inspire others and that they will reap the same rewards.

Dear Ann Landers: Six years ago I moved into this nice apartment building. I have a pleasant relationship with many tenants who are widows (as am I) and we sometimes play cards together.

This past year I've had some financial reverses and cannot give to the worthy causes as I always have in the past. The request envelopes are left at my door by "Building's Captains" who are friends. Should I drop a note of explanation in the enevelope so they won't think I'm cheap? — In The Red!

Dear Red: If you cannot give, ignore the request and say nothing. No explanation is necessary.

MANOR
Famous for Quality for Over 40 Years.

There's a better bread in town. Manor.

At Manor we use the old-fashioned yeast-rising method. That means the yeast has time to work unhurriedly. The dough has time to rest and rise. The way it should to bake out with a good, hearty taste.

And we take the time to hand-twist every loaf. To give our bread a smooth, even texture.

The roll call report

Mass transit subsidies end rejected by House

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Aug. 15 through Aug. 21:

HOUSE

MASS TRANSIT SUBSIDIES — Rejected, 197 for and 202 against, an amendment in opposition to federal operating subsidies for mass-transit systems. The amendment sought to eliminate $6 billion in subsidy money from the Federal Mass Transportation Act, a measure proposing $20 billion for construction, maintenance and other mass-transportation expenses borne by communities nationwide.

Supporters of the amendment argued that most of the $6 billion would benefit the largest cities, and that such subsidies are a waste of taxpayers' money.

"Operating subsidies actually encourage inefficiency, encourage transit strikes, encourage the levying of unreasonably low fares ... at taxpayers' expense," said Rep. Dale Milford, D-Tex.

Opponents called mass transportation an essential public service which needs federal help to stay out of debt, and said it eases the energy crisis and traffic congestion.

"Riders cannot be attracted without special inducements or incentives in the form of subsidies to stabilize fares in the face of continuously soaring operating costs," said Rep. Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass.

MASS TRANSIT FUNDING — Adopted, 257 for and 155 against, an amendment to the above bill which reduced from $20 billion to $11 billion the six-year authorization for federal mass transportation assistance to communities.

Supporters called a "yea" vote anti-inflationary and noted that President Ford had promised to veto any authorization exceeding $11 billion. Many supporters also felt that the bill was too generous to big cities.

Opponents were willing to lower the authorization to $15.8 billion but not to $11 billion. They argued that the issue was essentially one of spending priorities rather than of inflation. Some opponents disputed the Ford economic theory that balanced budgets are anti-inflationary, saying inflation is fought chiefly by other remedies.

Randall and Ichord voted yes.

TRUCKS — Adopted, 252 for and 150 against, an amendment to prevent heavier trucks from using the federal interstate highway system. The amendment struck mass transportation bill language permitting states to increase weight limits allowed on the U.S. interstate network. States would have been able to raise the present interstate limits from 18,000 to 20,000 pounds on a single axle and from 32,000 to 34,000 pounds on a tandem axle.

Supporters cited safety factors. "There is not a truck in this country which is obeying the 55-mile-an-hour limit," said Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio. "They will blow one off the road if one is going 50 miles an hour." Hays added that members could vote against the amendment, "but you be prepared, because your constituents will know about it."

Opponents noted that most states already permit higher-than-federal weight limits on their own highways, and argued that divergent federal and state limits make it difficult to route and regulate truck traffic. "Rep. William Harsha, R-Ohio, said: "It makes little sense to me to deny the use of the interstates which are built to standards to handle traffic of this weight."

Randall voted yes; Ichord voted no.

IMPEACHMENT REPORT — Accepted, 412 for and three against, the filing of the House Judiciary Committee report which underpinned the committee's votes recommending that President Richard Nixon be impeached by the House. The historical document contains a narrative of Watergate-related events and evidence presented for and against the President's case. It was "accepted by the House, as distinguished from "approved." Members considered the report essential to history's understanding of why Nixon resigned the presidency.

SENATE

DEFENSE CUTS — Rejected, 37 for and 55 against, an amendment to cut $1.1 billion from the fiscal 1975 defense appropriations bill, reducing it from $82.1 billion to $81 billion.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., the sponsor, said national security would not be harmed because the cut would attack "waste and mismanagement" by the Pentagon. He said his amendment would also combat inflation.

Opponents noted that $82.1 billion was $5 billion below the White House request of $87.1 billion. The bill represents "one of the tightest defense budgets we have had in years...," said Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss.

Sens. Stuart Symington and Eagleton voted yes.

CONSUMER AGENCY — Rejected, 59 for and 35 against, a move to close debate and force a vote on the bill to establish the Agency for Consumer Protection, a body with power to speak for the consumer to business and other federal agencies.

A two-thirds majority was needed to kill the filibuster. The House-passed legislation is expected to die this session if the fourth and final attempt to break the filibuster, scheduled for mid-September, is unsuccessful.

The proposed agency, having legal teeth, is supported by Ralph Nader and Common Cause and opposed by such organizations as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

Eagleton and Symington voted yes.

The most valuable printed books are the three surviving perfect vellum copies of the Gutenberg Bible. The library of Congress copy, bound in three volumes, was obtained in 1930 from Dr. Otto Vollbehr, who paid about $330,000 for it.

Gas rate hike is approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Public Service Commission has approved an interim rate hike for the Associated Natural Gas Co.

Monday's order allowed the company to raise rates sufficient to increase its gross annual revenues by $691,209. The company had requested $1.3 million on both an interim and a permanent rate increase.

A hearing was scheduled Dec. 9 on whether to grant a $1.3 million increase, make the lower increase permanent, or to reduce it.

The interim rate will increase annual revenue by 9.3 per cent. This was the same amount allowed by the PSC for the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., which owns Associated Natural, in an interim gas increase earlier this month.

"The company's financial condition is so deteriorated that it is impairing its ability to render adequate service and it is rendering it unable to maintain its financial integrity," the PSC order said.

The cities of Chaffee, East Prairie, Kennett and Sikeston were intervenors in the case.

Seers revising outlook

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An economic miracle is likely to be needed if prices, jobs, interest rates and a whole strong of related subjects aren't to be chief among the issues of President Gerald R. Ford's 1976 election campaign.

Since economic miracles have been forever sought but seldom found, some economists now concede that the campaign issues are being written at the moment, and that the writing is looking even grimmer than before.

Consultants and other seers now are revising their outlook to include a continuation of recessionary factors into 1975. Poor growing conditions are expected to force food prices higher. The jobless rates is headed to six per cent.

Unpleasant as they are, these easily understood indicators of performance are mere symptoms of underlying difficulties that some business analysts term grave and that few consider less than worrisome.

For one thing, business is finding it difficult to finance itself. Utilities, unable to sell stock, are paying inflationary interest rates for borrowed money. Other companies are seeking federal help.

Wall Street has fallen into a coma, and has little to offer either small or large businesses. Relatively few companies now attempt to sell new stock issues, especially the small, emerging businesses. Incorporations are way off.

Housing is very hard hit. The thrift institutions, which support housing, can offer only half the interest rate available at some other institutions. And so they have little money to lend on mortgages.

This has the predictable impact of reducing the demand for housing and putting some builders into a bind that is almost diabolical.

It goes like this: The thrifts offer only 5.25 per cent on passbook savings. With higher rates available from others, including Uncle Sam, people withdraw their funds. This is disintermediation.

The loan-making ability of the thrifts — savings and loan associations and savings banks — is thus impaired. The housing industry goes into a recession. While people might want houses they can't finance them.

Neither can the builder finance himself. The banks which lend to builders specify that the borrower maintain a minimum net worth in order to remain credit-worthy. But the builder can't sell enough homes to maintain his net worth.

For Ford to untangle knots such as this quickly and under pressure of time would make the late great magician Henry Houdini's underwater escapades seem dull.

Accused man agrees to tests

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Al Byron Johnson, 22, is free on $40,000 bond after being arraigned on two charges of rape and one of attempted rape and has agreed to enter an Omaha, Neb., hospital for "whatever testing the hospital staff feels appropriate."

Johnson was arraigned Monday and a preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 19 in Douglas County court on the charges in connection with attacks on women near and on the campus of the University of Kansas.

Johnson, of Fremont, Neb., played basketball at Ottawa, Kan., University, where he was graduated in May.

A trial is scheduled in Lincoln, Neb., for Johnson on one charge of rape and one charge of assault with intent to rape. He pleaded innocent to both charges.

Soviet industry hasn't produced what designers have created

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) —The women at the fashion show watched with avid interest as a model wearing a denim pants suit strolled down the runway, followed later by a girl in a filmy black cocktail dress with a deep V-neck and practically no back

Seven blocks away, Gum, the biggest department store in Moscow, diplayed nothing remotely resembling the fashions the women had seen at Moscow's House of Fashion.

In a top Soviet Newspaper, a reader recently complained to Vyacheslav Zaitsev, the Soviet Union's foremost fashion designer, about the lack of attractive clothes. "Why can't we get 'fashionable' fashions?" she asked.

An official of the Soviet Ministry on Light Industry recently criticized designers of the House of Fashion, the haute couture of the Soviet fashion industry, and other designers for creating clothes which could not be duplicated by clothing factories.

Zaitsev, on the other hand, complained in an interview two years ago that "we send designs to the factories and sometimes don't recognize them as our own when the articles appear."

But today the designers and the Ministry of Light Industry, which governs the Soviet fashion world, claim they're on the road to solving the problem.

Now, fashion houses must work directly with clothing factories in their design of clothes, "taking into account the peculiarities of mass production, technological opportunities, availability of cloth. And decoration," said G. P. Antonova, a ministry official.

And it still remains to be seen whether the frilly, feminine clothes modeled at that recent fashion show will actually turn up in stores a year from now. They can't be purchased at the House of Fashion.

Few attractive things are currently in the shops. A check of several clothing stores and the clothing sections of large department stores revealed a limited selection of dresses and pantsuits, most of which appeared to be designed for plump, middle-aged women.

Despite her problems in getting attractive clothes, the Russian woman has become more fashion conscious and betterdressed in the past few years, say Westerners living in Moscow.

Clothes are more colorful and styles more varied, they report. Many young women have rejected the frizzy, dyed hair and heavy makeup of their elder sisters and mothers and opted for long hair and the natural look. Jeans are a more common sight now on the streets.

★ ★ ★

Most of the better-dressed women do not buy ready-made clothes, Westerners say. They either make them themselves or have them made by dressmakers, using patterns or pictures cut out of fashion magazines.

"The material available and the patterns have improved much more than retail clothes," said one American.

Zaitsev said he wants to improve both the quality of clothes on the rack and the fashion-consciousness of all Russians, including men.

"People should be as well dressed when they go to work, as when they go to the theater, concerts or weekend parties," he said in a recent article in Literaturnaya Gazeta (Literary Gazette).

The boyish-looking designer, his longish hair curling softly around his face, admitted that the Soviet fashion industry provides no guidance for women on what should be worn where.

"We keep that information secret, creating grounds for incredible rumors," he said in the article. "For example, young girls are saying that the look to have now is a round face and plucked eyebrows. That's absurd."

He advocated a weekly Soviet television program to advise women what to wear to work, parties and the theater and "what we should renounce in order not to look old-fashioned."

The 26-year-old designer also advocated opening specialty shops or boutiques for young people to help them improve their fashion consciousness.

Zaitsev outlined his ideas in a long interview with several American correspondents at the House of Fashion. Several other designers and a couple of models sat in.

"Two or three years ago, we admired and idolized French designers," he said. "but in the course of time we have developed and matured. The time of blind admiration of European fashion vanished, and we have come to critical attitudes to their proposals. They're a barometer for us. We check ourselves against them ..."

The spring-summer collection, however, shows a definite Western influence, with denim pantsuits, jeans, casual cotton pants and tops for the beach, and flowing chiffon and crepe cocktail dresses.

In fashion, out of stock

An audience at Moscow's House of Fashion is treated to a yellow, blue and red pantsuit. Because of production problems it may be a year or maybe never before styles like this will actually be manufactured for sale in Russian department stores. (AP)

From daring to drab

A short black cocktail dress with a V-neck is paired with a black coat trimmed in white fur in this showing at Moscow's House of Fashion. Russian designers are now trying to see to it that their creations somehow survive a production process which seems to turn everything into shapeless drab print frocks. (AP)

Soviet resort town imitates Riviera

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer

SOCHI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Sochi is trying to act like the French Riviera, with such watering havens as Vichy and Baden-Baden thrown in. It has come a certain distance, but Coney Island style crowds are choking up this workers' paradise.

A visitor from Moscow has to do a double-take to realize he's still in the Soviet Union. The spreading acacia, palm and magnolia trees along the welltended streets and sidewalks hide much of the Communist party sloganry and the inevitable presence of Lenin.

The air is tropically soft and the Black Sea is inviting — after a painful struggle across stone-strewn beaches.

You might like to have a meal of fresh fish, instead of leathery beef, but fish is mysteriously hard to come by in Sochi.

Striking stone buildings, some with Corinthian columns, distract the viewer's eyes from traditional Communist-modern high rises, which look better here in the meridional sun.

An official guide book notes that pre-revolutionary Sochi was a "paradise in chains" and virtually neglected by Tsarist authorities who let malaria run rampant in the area. It was V.I. Lenin who "devoted special attention to the development of health resorts," including Sochi. And Stalin, who used to have a street named after him here, had his Black Sea dacha in Sochi.

The greater Sochi resort area stretches for about 90 miles along the northeastern shore of the Black Sea at about the same parallel as the French Riviera and Coney Island.

The "Pearl of the Black Sea" boasts numerous hotels, 450 restaurants and cafes and some 60 sanatoriums where Soviets come for rest and medical care including treatment at hydrogen sulphide springs originating from the lower levels of the Black Sea.

One of the sanatoriums, which is said by its officials to offer "average" facilities, is an elegant stone structure with Greek columned facade, luxuriant gardens, chandelier hung salons, a well furnished library, theater, dining room and spacious rooms. This is reserved for workers, who can get a 24-day cure for as little as 48 rubles ($62).

Sochi has an off-season population of 264,000, which is sometimes nearly doubled in the summer. Normally, because of the limited accommodations, Soviets make reservations well in advance, but many other holidaymakers come to Sochi without any guarantee of sleeping space. Local residents often rent out rooms to the "wildcat" trade.

The biggest and newest hotel is the 20-story Zhemchuzhina (Pearl) Hotel, located in a valley giving onto the sea. Spread out for several blocks along the seafront is a sprawling beach house with a partly open roof and concrete flooring where bathers can lounge on mattresses — avoiding the rocky beach.

This is the plushiest of the beach areas and it caters mainly to tourists from Communist bloc countries. Other more jammed beaches are located up and down the coast.

Sochi has growing pains like many other resort areas in the world. Hotel building can't keep up with the demand. The picturesque road winding along the coast is not sufficient to carry the traffic back and forth to the area's only big airport, at Adler. A new straight, wide-laned highway is being built through the coastal bluffs, scarring the view.

Another way to reach Sochi is by hydrofoil from other Black Sea ports. The Soviet hydrofoils, which easily match or better those made in the West, roar across the sea at more than 45 miles an hour as dolphins play in their wake.

Manson's disciples continue

By DICK KLEINER

LOS ANGELES — Some of the original members of Charles Manson's "family" are still operating, says Brooks Poston, one of the very few Manson members who managed to escape Manson's clutches.

"The girls are in control of the family now," Poston says. 'I'm not sure if they are capable of any crimes now, simply because there is no one strong personality there any more — nobody who can tell them what to do."

For nine months, in 1969 and 1970, Brooks Poston was a member in good standing of Manson and his group of warped disciples. In February, 1970, he woke up to what was going on.

"I was dissatisfied," he says, "but I didn't know how to leave. I wasn't sure that he wasn't Christ — if he really was, then I shouldn't go. But I didn't like it with him. I had to eat, sleep, do everything when he told me. And I didn't like it when he beat up the girls."

For a while, when Manson was in Los Angeles and Poston and some others were left behind at the family's ranch, they were apart. That was when a man named Paul Crockett met Poston and convinced him he should do something constructive with his life.

With Crockett's help, Poston and one or two others escaped. Today, Brooks Poston is a member of a musical group, Desert Sun. And, perhaps to do penance for what his former family members did, he also is active with the Foundation For the Advancement of Human Awareness, working with people to make the most of their potential.

Poston is a lean, fair-haired Texan, now 25, who left home as a teen-ager because he was "disenchanted with my parents." He came to California to finish high school but soon found himself entrapped by Manson.

"I met this girl who took me to see Charley," he says. "The first thing I saw Charley do was kneel down and kiss a guy's feet. That impressed me. Also, he had five girls living with him. That was a natural trap for guys. Charley gave me a shirt. He said anything that was his was mine."

Poston was impressionable and Manson was clever. It didn't take the ex-convict long to have Poston as his newest disciple.

"Charlie was very unusual," Poston says. "He was very humble. He said the right words — love, peace, freedom. All the phrases which appealed to me then.

"He knew how to play on our weaknesses. One girl had body hair. She felt inadequate. Charley told her she was beautiful.

"To us, he was a Christ-figure. I was on acid then, of course, but I saw him do things, like he would grant eternal life to people. He was miraculous."

Through careful administration of drugs, plus his native skill at psychology, Manson subjugated his family until they would do anything and everything he told them to.

Fortunately for Poston, he retained enough of his inhibitions so that Manson did not completely trust him. Thus, he was, as he says, "the bottom man on the totem pole.

"I wasn't included in a lot of things," he says. "I wasn't asked to take part in the orgies. I had to do the physical labor — I worked as a cowboy. I shoveled a lot of horse manure, I chopped a lot of wood."

Still, for those many months, Poston followed Manson. One of Charley's ideas was that an inter-racial war — he called it "helter-skelter" — between blacks and whites was coming. They all believed him.

"He re-programmed everyone who came in to accept his ideas," Poston says. "He used drugs, singing — he was a fabulous musician — and talking. He would say 'Everyone must submit to my love.' He'd repeat it on acid trips. You would feel it, registering like a shock wave on your body.

"He'd stretch himself on a cross. He'd say, 'Good is bad and bad is good.' His ideas took over as our reality."

Even after Poston made his break, in February of 1970, Manson tried to lure him back. Poston, Crockett and some others had a cabin in the woods.

"Charley figured if he couldn't get us back, he'd kill us," Poston says. "He tried to sneak up on our cabin at night. But we had a big dog and he'd start to growl. We'd go out and there would be Charley with a knife.

"'One of these nights,' he said, '"I'm going to get you."'

But Poston and the other escapees managed to survive. They were the lucky ones.

"It was literally total insanity," Poston says now. "I decided to talk to people, young people, to tell them there is another way to freedom. I got myself in it and I got myself out of it."

Salem youth is charged with fatal stabbing

SALEM, Mo. (AP) — Harold Atchison, 18, of Salem, Mo., has been charged with first-degree murder in the stabbing death of 66-year-old store owner Frank Bennett.

Atchison was arrested late Sunday by St. Louis police and turned over to Dent County authorities Monday.

Bennett was stabbed six times Aug. 21 in his grocery store and died a short time later, officers said.

Authorities said witnesses claim they saw Atchison at the store shortly after the stabbing

An elephant at a zoo in Wichita sneaks a bite of flowers for lunch by reaching over a retaining wall designed to separate him from the flowers. This elephant's most noted accessory makes the task easy, even for this baby version. (AP Wirephoto)

Coed prison is 'healthy'

By BETTY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — "Sexual intercourse is prohibited, but that's not to say it's not engaged in. We'd be pretty naive if we said that. But it's discreet," says Peter Bishop. He is the acting superintendent of the nation's first coed prison.

"When the prison went coed (in March, 1973), some people saw the institution turning into a 24-hour orgy. But they were laymen's fantasies," Bishop said.

He added that coeducation has brought some problems to the prison, "but they are much more healthy kinds of problems, problems of interrelationships between men and women..

"If nothing else, this being the most humane way to treat people is still sufficient reason for it, even if the recidivism rate does not change one iota," Bishop said. He noted that no figures have been compiled yet on how many in the coed program have returned to jail.

The Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Framingham resembles a college campus. Four brick dormitory buildings, two for men and two for women, are grouped around a quadrangle.

Inmates, called residents, have private rooms, which they are free to decorate. A chain link fence is the only barrier to freedom, and prison guards, mostly unarmed and wearing civilian clothes, mingle with the 60 men and 60 women inmates.

Most of the male inmates are only a few months away from parole and go each day to work or education release programs. Women are incarcerated at Framingham for all types of violent crimes, especially drug-related offenses.

Murdoch MacDonald, a 48-year-old lifer who has served 22 years for a double murder, said his transfer to Framingham from the maximum security state prison at Walpole "was about the best thing that ever happened to me. It is such a learning experience, relating to women again. It's a decompression chamber ..."

Diane Dixon, 23, serving a life term for murder, said the coeducational situation was "... more open and the men and women get along fairly well."

"We have a tight relationship," said Eli Lizotte, 23, who said she was sent to Framingham for a drug-related crime. She said the men "are not here to play house. They just want to do their time and get out."

One couple who met at the prison married while on a furlough and returned to the institution.

Wandering cub

Dutchess, a lion at Chicago's Brookfield Zoo, takes matters into her own mouth when one of her cubs wanders too far from her. Dutchess is very protective of her five-week-old cubs and had some snarls for the photographer. (AP Wirephoto)
